Twenty-Nine Out Of Fifty States Have Public Accommodation Laws

By AL KUETTNER
United Press International
Twenty-nine of the 50 states already have public accommodation laws similar to that proposed in President Kennedy's civil rights bill.

Racial demonstrations aimed at alleged discrimination in housing and business have cropped up in Boston. Yet, Massachusetts has one of the strictest anti-discrimination statutes. It forbids bias in sale, rental or lease of public or private housing except in two-family dwellings partially occupied by the owner.

Has Accommodations Law
Maryland, scene of demonstrations in Baltimore and Cambridge, has an accommodations law in half the state's 22 counties. The measure covers motels, hotels and restaurants but exempts places that get most of their business from alcoholic beverages. Parks, clubs and private beaches also are excused.

It's Your Law

Now that millions of people are taking their summer vacations and driving about the country, automobile accidents are occurring with increasing frequency. When involved in an accident, it is hard to keep your wits about you and know just what to do.

It is therefore a good idea to plan in advance just what you would do in event of a smash-up. Here are a few simple rules that every driver should commit to memory:

- 1. Stop! Failure to stop can result in serious criminal consequences.
2. Render aid. If anyone is injured: (1) Render first aid. (2) Stop bleeding. (3) Call a doctor or an ambulance or both. (4) Do not move an injured person in any way that could possibly add to his injury.
3. Protect the scene from further damage. You may be liable for damages to approaching drivers, unless they are properly warned. If the highway is obstructed at night, have someone turn his headlights on the wrecked vehicles.
4. Call an officer. Policemen, highway patrolmen, sheriffs and their deputies are trained accident investigators whose testimony may be invaluable in establishing your civil claim for damages.
5. Gather information. Write it down. Don't trust your memory. Don't guess—be specific. Measure skid marks. Step off distances. Be sure to obtain names and addresses of witnesses. You are required by law to exhibit your driver's license to the other driver—and he must do the same.
6. Be careful what you say. Even if you feel you probably are to blame, it is best to make no admission. You may learn later that the other driver was equally at fault, or more so. Emotional comments can be misconstrued by others, or may be misquoted. Whatever you say, make it factual.
7. See your doctor if there is the slightest chance you may be injured. Serious injuries do not always result in immediate pain or bloodshed.
8. Consult your lawyer immediately. The sooner your lawyer is brought into the matter, the better he can advise you and protect your rights. He can obtain statements from the witness while their memories are fresh, and do many other things to insure that the true facts are preserved. Get your lawyer's advice before giving any interviews or statements to investigators or adjusters for the other side.
9. Inform your insurance company promptly. Failure to do so may void your policy.
10. Report the accident to the sheriff, or to the police department, or to the Department of Motor Vehicles.
An official accident report form may be procured from any of the above-listed agencies.

Russian Joke Reflects Sombre Attitude Toward Nuclear War

MOSCOW (UPI) — "In case of atomic attack," says one Russian to another, "cover yourself with a white sheet and crawl slowly to the cemetery."

"Why slowly?" asked the friend. "So as not to cause panic," answers the other.

This joke reflects the somber attitude which many Russians are taking towards thermonuclear war. And in recent weeks they have received strong warnings from Premier Nikita Khrushchev and the Soviet press as to what it may be like.

For a long time, the press avoided the subject. There were no pamphlets describing what to do. There was no fallout shelter program as in the United States. Khrushchev put it simply July 29 when he said: "Won't the living envy the dead?"

He was referring to the wholesale pollution of the atmosphere which a thermonuclear war might cause.

The Sino-Soviet rift has deepened. Descriptions of the horrors have become more frequent. They are particularly occasioned by the Chinese advocacy of violent means to overcome capitalism and imperialism.

Speaking at a friendship meeting for visiting Hungarian leader Janos Kadar, July 29, Khrushchev ridiculed the idea that a bright new society could be built "on the corpses of millions and millions of dead."

"By the calculations of experts, about one billion persons would be killed as a result of the very first blow, and the great cities of Europe, Asia and North America could be destroyed," he said.

Pravda Story
The Communist newspaper Pravda a few days later said: "The effects of a thermonuclear war would show on life's progeny, bringing death and disease, and carrying with it a deformed growth of humanity."

Khrushchev played on a similar theme in his written message to an international women's conference here in June.

"The peoples realize more and more clearly that a new world war, should it break out, will be different from past wars."

"It will mean the loss of hundreds of millions of people, the destruction of the fruits of creative efforts of dozens of generations. It will inevitably reduce to ashes very much of what is generally referred to as civilization."

SHIRLENE BRAZIE'S FOOD FOR THOUGHT

"Please eat and have good health" was the expression used by the Russian people. It was traditional to serve their meals with huge platters and tureens. They considered a goose to be a silly bird—too much for one person to eat but not enough for two.

The tricks they do with cabbage and sour cream distinguish them from the rest of the world. You don't have to like sour cream to enjoy their cooking because it can't be recognized. It simply adds a slightly unusual flavor to the food.

Rare Bird

Not many in captivity. Nearly extinct. He represents the lonely, vanishing breed of people who do not read newspapers. Hard to find people not reading newspapers? It's almost impossible. Because over 99 million people, in 9 out of every 10 households, read newspapers. Are they all birds of a feather? Nothing could be further from the truth. People of all tastes and persuasions, in every age group, educational level, income bracket find a private sanctuary each day in the daily newspaper they choose to call their own. The daily newspaper is highly selective and personal, yet completely universal. This is the special quality only the daily paper can deliver.
