

Kennedy Infant's Fight For Air Proves Too Much For Tiny Heart

early afternoon because of a decline in the infant's condition. The child's breathing improved after he was placed in the huge pressure chamber which provided needed oxygen for his tiny lungs.

But at 2:10 a.m. EDT, the President was awakened in his fourth floor room at the hospital and advised to go to the chamber on the ground level.

About 20 minutes later, he was joined by his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, and his long-time associate and White House receptionist David Powers, who had been staying at the President's downtown hotel and had been called to the hospital to be with Kennedy.

Remained An Hour
The President, his brother, and Powers went to an area near the pressure chamber and remained there approximately an hour.

Salinger said the President went back to his room at about 3:10 a.m. EDT. But more than 2 a.m., he was called back to the pressure chamber area, as were the attorney general and Powers. The three were there when the child, still within the chamber, drew his final breath.

Salinger said there were no clergymen present when the infant died. He said he did not know whether last rites of the Catholic Church had been administered.

Baptized After Birth
The baby was baptized minutes after his birth by a priest in the section at 12:32 p.m. EDT Wednesday. The baptism was conducted by Otis AFB Chaplain Joseph Scallion because of its premature birth.

Salinger said he did not know, at the time of his announcement, when the First Lady would be notified of her son's death and by whom it would be done.

Mrs. Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, had flown by helicopter from Cape Cod with the President Thursday afternoon to see the child. Mrs. Auchincloss returned to Otis Thursday evening.

The President had telephoned Mrs. Kennedy at least twice during the day to tell her not to worry, the child was feeling better.

President Appeared Grim
This had increased optimism about the child's condition, but it was suspected among some people in the traveling White House group that the President had been consoling his wife in a husbandly way but was deeply worried.

Kennedy was grim-faced when he returned to the hospital during the afternoon after getting word that the baby's condition had worsened. But as the afternoon and evening wore on, he seemed to be just a bit more at ease, smiling faintly at cheering spectators who shouted their congratulations to him upon being a father again.

The arrival of the attorney general, accompanied by Salinger, at the hospital led to speculation that bad news was in store. They got there at 2:32 a.m. EDT. At 4:03 a.m. EDT, Assistant White House Press Secretary Malcolm Kilduff bustled into the hospital lobby and waved a "follow me" to the newsmen who had already assembled there on their own or after being called.

Birch Society Coordinator To Talk Here

The Roseburg chapter of the John Birch Society failed to draw a debating opponent when it challenged the Roseburg League of Women Voters recently, so it is scheduling a meeting Tuesday night to take the League on whether it is represented or not. The subject will be the United Nations, and the speaker will be Leslie Fleming, state coordinator of the John Birch Society.

He says his object will be "to show the League of Women Voters to be prevaricators with their own material." (The League has long been a staunch backer of the United Nations.)

Fleming said he had recently engaged in a debate on the subject of the United Nations in Medford. His opponent was Professor Urban Whittaker of the University of San Francisco. Fleming indicated the professor had not been able to maintain his position in the debate.

In his advance handbook, Fleming says, "Is this why the League of Women Voters of Roseburg refused to debate?"

The meeting will take place at 8 p.m. in the Umpqua Hotel. Tickets are being sold by members and at the door.

IFA Head Talks On Tree Damage

SALEM (UPI) — A year and a half's supply of timber for the entire Oregon-Washington forest industry was blown down in the windstorm last Oct. 12. W. D. Hagenstein, executive vice president of the Industrial Forestry Association, said Thursday.

He estimated the blowdown at 17 billion board feet. Loggers salvaged two and a half billion board feet, or about 15 million board feet a day, during the first half of 1963, he estimated.

The timber disaster committee, which Hagenstein heads, is seeking to remove most of the salvage by June of next year to reduce the threat of tree killing bark beetles which often build up in blowdown and later spread to living trees.

Warm Weather Due
The five-day weather forecast according to the Weather Bureau station at the Roseburg airport calls for temperatures averaging normal to much above normal with little or no precipitation. Highs will be mostly 80 to 85 except 65 to 75 along the coast. Lows will be 50 to 60 degrees.

Watchdog Stolen
SALEM (UPI) — Charles F. Martin, of Marion, told police he parked his car here and left his dog behind to keep an eye on things.

Rusk Talks Cold War With Khrush Today

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk returned today from informal talks on the sunny Black Sea with Premier Nikita Khrushchev aimed at easing cold war tensions and guaranteeing West Berlin security.

His special flight landed here after a day of informal, shirt-sleeve talks with the vacationing Soviet leader at Gagra on the Russian Riviera.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrived with him. Rusk started his day early at Khrushchev's vacation villa after spending the night in a nearby government guest house with members of his party.

The Soviet premier, in obviously good spirits, introduced Rusk and his party to members of his family and even suggested that they take a swim in his heated pool before getting down to serious discussions.

Some of Khrushchev's grandchildren romped on the lawn in front of the house. They were half naked in the brilliant sunshine and 90 degree temperature.

After a picture-taking session for the Soviet and Western newsmen covering the talks, Khrushchev led Rusk and his group to the veranda of a recreation building near the main house.

Just before they got down to serious discussions, Khrushchev stepped inside and removed his jacket. He came out wearing a loose-fitting, collarless Ukrainian shirt.

Rusk Removes Jacket
Rusk removed his jacket also to keep in step with the informal atmosphere.

Khrushchev's relaxed mood was evident when he gave orders to let started newsmen enjoy themselves on his estate.

"Let the correspondents go as they like, go for a stroll or go bathing—or anything they want," he said.

Look Over Estate
A surprised aide put the bathhouse and other recreation facilities at the disposal of the newsmen. The Americans fanned out on the estate to see as much as possible.

Rusk, who flew here Thursday from Leningrad with a short stopover in Moscow, was returning to the Soviet capital later today.

Diplomatic sources in the Soviet capital said Rusk planned to "cover the waterfront" in his talks with Khrushchev.

They said Rusk's discussions may range from major cold war issues to the question of freeing an imprisoned American.

Rusk, who came to Moscow to sign the nuclear test ban treaty, has remained to hold talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Khrushchev on possible further progress in easing the cold war.

He flew Thursday to Khrushchev's holiday villa near the Black Sea resort of Gagra and was due back in the capital later today.

Both sides have expressed the hope that the treaty banning nuclear tests in the air, outer space, and under water is "only a beginning" of steps to ease tensions between East and West.

But there appear to be differences over what step to take next. Khrushchev has pressed for a non-aggression pact between NATO and the Warsaw treaty alliance.

The United States is more concerned with the security of Berlin and with the Soviet suggestion that means be found to guard against surprise attack by either side.

Berlin has taken on new importance in the thinking of the American delegation, which also includes Ambassador Foy D. Kohler and the former ambassador to Moscow, Llewellyn D. Thompson.

This is because of fears Khrushchev's non-aggression treaty plan might pose new dangers for Berlin's security.

Rusk will fly to Bonn Saturday to discuss these and other implications of the East-West talks with West German officials.

The Bonn government has been reluctant to sign the test ban treaty, fearing it would imply recognition of Communist East Germany, and opposes the non-aggression treaty for the same reasons.

Actuary To Speak At Hotel Saturday
K. P. Chartier, public actuary and author of the book "Your Pocketbook Is Leaking," will be guest speaker at a public service meeting at the Hotel Umpqua at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Chartier, who lives in Dallas, Tex. and who has 43 years experience in the life insurance business, was invited to Roseburg as a public service by Paul L. Dillon, local professional engineer.

Dillon said Chartier's talk here will be a technical "bare bones" explanation of the insurance business, including how the premium is made up, how the insurance companies use your premiums, and what charges can be safely eliminated without sacrificing insurance protection.

Train Robbery Losses Soar To Nearly $8 Million Today

LONDON (UPI) — Confirmed bank losses in the biggest robbery of all time soared today toward $8 million.

Insurance companies hit by the loss offered a record reward of more than half a million dollars for capture of the mail train robbers and recovery of the loot.

Officials said the known loss thus far in Thursday's "great train robbery" now totaled $7,005,000—with the ultimate figure expected to run as high as $8.4 million.

As the reward money piled up
In hopes of inducing a "squealer" to offer information about the gang who staged the smooth-efficient ambush of the Glasgow-to-London train, Scotland Yard and post office security men scoured the countryside without a single clue.

The bandits appeared to have vanished with their huge haul of cash and gems which they took from 120 mail sacks and carted away in trucks and a car in Thursday's pre-dawn darkness.

There was a possibility the loot and at least some of the robbers already were out of the country. The London Evening News quoted an unidentified man as saying he saw an airplane land and take off again in a hurry at a disused airfield near the site of the train robbery and at about the time it took place Thursday.

As police explored this latest mystery phase of the robbery, staged by bandits whose faces were masked by women's stockings and who were armed with crowbars, blackjacks and guns, the insurance brokers offered $500,000 in reward money.

Individual banks — which had shipments of cash in varying amounts en route to the Bank of England in London — added their own rewards to the insurance brokers' offer. Officials said they felt the amount of the reward money almost certainly would tempt some member of the underworld to furnish some leads to the robber gang, whose number originally was estimated at from 20 to 30 but which may have been smaller.

The gigantic record reward offer was made by the firms of Hart and Co. and Toplis and Harding, insurance assessors.

As Scotland Yard stepped up one of history's greatest man-hunts, some of the banks affected increased their original reward offers.

The Midland Bank, for instance boosted its offer from $70,000 to $140,000, as the nation's banks began to learn just exactly what they had lost in the wild West-style train robbery.

Some New Thinking
The amazing success of the bandit operation near Cheddington, 40 miles north of London, was causing some new thinking on Britain's traditional concept that neither policeman nor robbers usually carry guns.

Because of severe penalties for harming a policeman, the underworld has been reluctant to use firearms.

Revisions Come First
It does not plan to turn its attention to rate cuts until it has finished work on structural revisions.

By rejecting many of the controversial revenue-producing revisions recommended by Kennedy the committee apparently has assured that every taxpayer would get at least some tax relief under the compromise tax bill.

The reduction would be 25 per cent for those individual taxpayers who use the standard reduction for personal expenses and who have taxable incomes of no more than $1,000. The 25 per cent would apply also to married couples with taxable incomes of no more than $2,000.

Under existing law the lowest tax rate of 20 per cent applies to the first $2,000 in taxable income for an individual and the first $4,000 in taxable income for a married couple.

The compromise plan would split this $2,000-$4,000 first bracket into two brackets. It would apply a rate of 15 per cent to the new first bracket ($1,000 for a single person and $2,000 for a married couple.) world usually commits crimes without firearms.

At least some of the mail train bandits carried firearms, using them to threaten the unarmed train crew and post office personnel aboard. A post office spokesman said there were no armed guards on the train, a usual practice since it has been felt that the large force of mail sorters normally was enough to keep watch.

This is contrary to American practice, where a minimum of at least two armed "clerks" or guards are aboard every U.S. mail train.

Authorities Query 14 Haitian Exiles
SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — Dominican authorities in the northern border town of Dajabon today questioned 14 Haitian exiles who said they were the remnants of an invasion that was routed by Haitian government troops.

Paul Verna, top Haitian exile representative here, discounted their story. He said the main force of at least 300 men was still intact in northern Haiti and would fight on to topple Haitian President Francois Duvalier.

A spokesman for the 14 uniformed exiles said they had escaped into the Dominican Republic after being cut off from the main invasion group. He said the bulk of the invaders had "fled into the mountains."

Their story jibed with Haitian government claims that the invasion force had been crushed by loyal troops within hours after launching its first attack early Monday morning. Haiti charges that the invaders entered the country from the Dominican side of the border with "complicity" of Dominican authorities.

The Dominican government has denied involvement in the invasion.

Multnomah Hotel Sale Reported Not Imminent
PORTLAND (UPI) — Reports that active efforts are being made to sell the 51-year-old Multnomah Hotel here were denied Thursday by Gordon Bass, senior vice president of Western International Hotels.

Bass said his firm had a 12-year lease on the hotel. He indicated that any hotel was for sale if the right price were offered but said sale of the Multnomah was not imminent.

Grange Leader Dies
PORTLAND (UPI) — Raymond W. Gill, 80, former state Grange master and Republican legislator, died Thursday in a Portland hospital.

He was a cofounder of the Gill Bros. Seed Co.
