Skill Makes Up For Overbid

By OSWALD JACOBY
(Written For NEA)

If you want to overbid a little, that is fine. All you have to do is to play the hand well, and also find the opponents' cards favorably located.

In this connection Arlene Monheim of Steubenville, Ohio, writes "I don't suppose you approve of my five club bid, but I was playing with a very conservative partner and I felt like overbidding a trifle. I couldn't have overbid too much because I wound up making an extra trick after my opponents each led a trump."

Her play is a good example of giving the cards a chance to be where should in order to make an optimistic contract.

She noted that she needed to find East with the king of spades and the diamonds well divided if she wanted to make her contract. Hence she won the first trick in dummy and led a low spade. East rose with the king and led another trump. Now Arlene played the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in dummy. Then she returning to her own hand by leading a spade to her queen.

The last and most important hurdle was left. Would diamonds break? She led a third diamond and ruffed in dummy. The opponents were kind enough to drop the king and queen for her, and now all that was left was mopping up. She discarded her one heart on the ace of spades, returned to her hand by ruffing a heart, played her last trump to pull West's last tooth, and claimed the balance with her remaining three diamonds.

Scotland Yard Investigating Possible Sabotage Of Train's Theft-Proof Cars

By MICHAEL CLAFFEY
United Press International
LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard's crack "Flying Squad" staged lightning pre-dawn raids in London's East End slums today in a desperate search for clues to the greatest train robbery in history.

Police sources said detectives expected to make arrests soon in the theft of $7 million from a Glasgow-to-London mail train last Thursday.

But Sir Ronald Howe, train assistant commissioner at Scotland Yard, was quoted by Daily Express as saying he personally considered the chances of capturing the thieves as "pretty slim."

Howe headed the yard's Criminal Investigation Division (CID) for 12 years.

"... Because of the antiquated structure of our police force the best CID brains in the country arrived late on the job," he was quoted as saying.

The Express said Howe claimed Scotland Yard did not get to the scene until nearly a day after the robbery.

Get Record Take
The robbery, carried out with the boldness and precision of a commando raid, resulted in the posting of a record $728,000 in reward money.

It was hoped the reward, about 10 per cent of the loot, would tempt an informer to come forward with information to put the holdup gang behind bars.

According to reports, between 20 and 30 men staged the theft.

Post Master General Reginald Bevins hinted Friday night that three special railroad cars supposed to be theft-proof may have been sabotaged.

"To say the least, it is rather mysterious and coincidental that these three (cars) have broken down," Bevins said. "One went out on June 22 with a 'hot axle,' a second on July 4 with the same trouble and the third on Aug. 1 with a 'flat tire' (damaged wheel)."

Shocked At Delay
"I cannot rule out the possibility that these coaches were tampered with although I think it unlikely. But I am shocked and disturbed at the apparent delay in getting these top priority coaches back into service.

"If one of these coaches had been on the hijacked train it might not have foiled the robbery but it would certainly have made the thieves' task more difficult," he said.

Police sources said the reward is a lot more than any individual gang member's cut would be.

SALES THROUGH LINES
Berra sailed through his lines without a fluff.

Later he said, "television is big enough for both me and Yogi Berra. I was going to sue the Yogi Berra program for using my name, until somebody reminded me Yogi isn't my real name—it's Lawrence."

Asked by Berardino if he would like to be a regular member of the cast, Berra replied: "I haven't sunk that far yet."

Completion Date Is Set Aug. 24 For Jetty Work

Completion date of Aug. 24 for rehabilitation of the Umpqua south jetty at the mouth of the Umpqua River was announced by Commissioner Howard Hinsdale at the regular monthly meeting of the Port of Umpqua Commission held in Reedsport this week.

The $2,500,000 project was started in the summer of 1962 under direction of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and resumed in the spring after a winter-weather shutdown.

Completion will include extension of the jetty to the terminal block created when the jetty was first constructed in 1933, and later extended to its present length. The partially submerged block resulting from destructive action of wind and waves was considered a hazard for sports fishermen and commercial vessels alike, resulting in appeals to Oregon Congressmen in Washington, D.C. for extension of the jetty to the original terminal block.

The airport contract involves ramp paving, including 1,700 cubic yards of rock and 1,500 square yards of asphaltic concrete, and other appurtenances and miscellaneous work.
