SHE'S A CHAMP — Grant Wheeler is mighty proud of his champion Corriedale ewe. Being the top producing sheep county in the state, Douglas County's competition in the sheep divisions is rugged. Particularly stiff is competition in the 4-H divisions, in which young people from all over the county take place. (News-Review photo)

STIFF COMPETITION was noted in the sheep showmanship division at the Douglas County Fair Friday. The winner in the section shows his pride. He is Ed Nielsen. Also staged were swine, dairy and beef showmanship in 4-H. More 4-H judging, in such things as forestry identification, flower judging, tractor driving and health are on tap today. (News-Review photo)

SWEEPING THE FIELD in black and white photography in the professional category at the Douglas County Fair was William Christensen of Roseburg, shown here with two of his prize-winning photographs. Christensen also took first and third awards in the colored portrait category. 'Chris' in the black and white section won a total of 10 awards, including firsts in all divisions entered. Articles Made By Sewing Machine Exhibited By Adults, Youngsters

All types of clothing and clothing accessories form a great part of the exhibits in the Machine Sewing Division of the Textile Department at the Douglas County Fair.

Many beautiful effects are produced with the aid of various sewing machine attachments which make embroidery and interesting trimmings.

Youngsters and teen-agers have a division, too, and have exhibits in embroidery, crocheting and knitting.

Winners in Division II of the Textile Department include:

Attendance Drops Off Sharply After Atlanta Pool Integrated

WHAT IT MEANS
(A continuing study of developments on the racial front)
By AL KUETTNER
United Press International

At 3 p.m. one day this week, the largest public pool in Atlanta had just 15 swimmers. One was a Negro.

No one paid the young Negro any attention except the white youth with whom he was swimming. They seemed to be having fun.

On the surface, all was calm, but nearby a police cruiser was parked. The officer-driver relaxed on a bench, sipping a milkshake. Inside the bathhouse, another policeman manned the ticket booth.

This was the first summer of swimming pool integration in Atlanta. Results: No serious incidents but pool attendance had dropped at least 50 per cent. Pools, formerly open in the evenings, were closing at 5 p.m. Integration groups were urging their white members to use public pools to prevent them from becoming "re-segregated."

Heated Issue

Few desegregation issues have generated more heat than efforts by Negroes to take a cool dip in the old public swimming hole.

Nashville, Tenn., is taking its first steps at getting pools back in operation after "wade-in" closings in 1961. They have been open for desegregated learn-to-swim classes this summer.

Segregated pools still operate at Tallahassee, Fla., and Chattanooga, Tenn., despite demonstrations. Negroes occasionally swim at a "white" pool in Knoxville, Tenn., without incident.

A number of cities have abandoned public parks to escape pool desegregation.

In Memphis, Tenn., one of the cities that closed pools, Negroes this week filed a motion in federal court demanding that pools be reopened on an integrated basis.

In Jackson, Miss., pools failed to open this summer after an integration order.

Closed Two Years

Pools were closed two seasons ago in Jacksonville, Fla., and Negro efforts to get them re-opened have failed.

In Lexington, N.C., where a service station attendant was killed and a photographer wounded during racial troubles in June, pools were closed after less than a week of integrated operation. The closing came after two barrels of oil were dumped into the pool one night.

Albany, Ga., sold its public swimming pool to newspaper publisher James H. Gray, who is operating it on a private and segregated basis.

Pools at Birmingham and Montgomery in Alabama are closed, and this extends in Montgomery to all parks and recreational areas.

Negro Teen-Agers Attack Police In N. J.

By United Press International

Negro teen-agers, enraged over a huge sign saying "Nigger go home," kicked, scratched and mauled police in Elizabeth, N. J. Friday in another violent civil rights demonstration.

Fists flew and several policemen were knocked to the ground and kicked.

The demonstrators, boys and girls and some first-graders, became incensed over a sign with letters two feet high and 25 feet long which said:

"Nigger go home, go home, where ever you live.

Eighty of the demonstrators were booked, and of these only three were adults. About half those arrested were girls.

The integrationists have been protesting alleged job hiring distration in the city's largest bank, an agreement was negotiated to crimination at two construction sites. Gov. Richard Hughes sent a top civil rights officer to meet with Negro leaders, and promised to take action on their complaints.

In East St. Louis, the scene this week of a massive demonhire Negores in banks and savings and loan associations.

An integration leader said four banks and four savings and loan associations had agreed to hire 20 Negroes immediately in nonscustodial jobs. Seven of the jobs will be full-time.

Ohter integration developments:

New York: The leaders of the massive civil rights march planned to take place in Washington Aug. 28 said President Kennedy agreed to meet with a civil rights delegation and unemployed workers on the morning of the scheduled march.

Mobile, Ala.: Mayor Charles S. Trimmier angrily denounced a ultimatum by Negro leaders that the city commission enact integration laws or face court action in 60 days.

Myrtle Beach, S. C.: Two states and the U.S. Public Health Service declined to participate in an interstate sanitation seminar here because of segregated facilities.

Kennedys Enjoy Quiet Weekend

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (UPI) —President and Mrs. Kennedy today resumed the quiet pace of their weekends by the sea with their daughter, Caroline, and son, John Jr.

The Chief Executive arrived late Friday afternoon to join his convalescent wife and their children. Several hours later he and Jacqueline waved farewell to the First Lady's sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, on her departure for Greece.

The First Lady's sister had flown here from Athens last Friday after the death of President and Mrs. Kennedy's son, Patrick, 39 hours following his birth 10 days ago.

With Caroline and John Jr. at her side, Mrs. Kennedy stood next to her husband and waved goodbye to the princess as she departed for New York on the first leg of her journey aboard the Kennedy family's twin-engine plane, Caroline.

Before driving his wife and children to the airport, the President got in a bit of golf at the Hyannis Port Club, near his summer home. He went there an hour or two after his arrival from Washington.

It was learned prior to his arrival that the First Lady had told staff personnel at the Otis Air Force Base, Mass., hospital, that she would like to have another baby next year.

She was reported to have said she would like to have her next child in their hospital—where she said she had received "wonderful treatment."

Sources said that the night before she left the hospital last Wednesday she told of her desire to have more children. She was said to have asked nurses how soon she could do so, and was told that this was a decision her doctor would have to make.

The First Lady, sources said, is doing "beautifully" in her recuperation from the Caesarian section birth —5½ weeks premature — of Patrick Bouvier Kennedy. She rested quietly most of Friday at the summer White House.
