Square Dancers At Eugene Meet

Douglas County square dance enthusiasts were well represented at the Far Western Square Dancers Convention held on the campus of the University of Oregon over the weekend.

According to Mrs. Arthur Selby, correspondent, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Kennaday of Glendale were in Eugene prior to the three-day affair to help in the preparations.

The square dancers leased facilities of the university, including dormitories, cafeterias and the gymnasium to accommodate the dancers. Sixty members laid 3,800 sheets of 4-by-8-foot particle board for the dance floor on the university parking lot.

Saturday, the closing night of dancing, there were 8,127 dancers and 3,980 spectators — the largest convention to be held in Oregon, according to Kennaday, chairman of the finance committee and former president of the organization in 1961.

There were many out-of-state dancers, some as far away as Shreveport, La., and including one caravan of 50 trailers from California. Committee members worked hard to locate accommodations for those who came by plane, bus and automobile.

The square dance state convention will be held in Grants Pass in 1964. Kennaday stated he hoped that enough interest can be shown by Roseburg people so that Roseburg will make a bid for the 1965 convention.

The attendance for 1963 shows 5,000 dancers from Oregon.

Canyonville Firm Gets Timber Tract

Jeffries Timber Corp. of Canyonville was high bidder Thursday on a tract of blowdown timber sold by the Umpqua National Forest.

The Canyonville firm submitted a bid of $35,575 for a tract known as Frieda's Last Salvage Sale located 13 miles southeast of Tillamook on 100 acres in the Cow Creek Ranger District.

The tract contains 1,500,000 board feet of timber appraised at $29,125. This included 1 million board feet of Douglas fir and pine appraised at $24.60 per thousand and 500,000 board feet of western hemlock and other species appraised at $9.05 per thousand.

The Jeffries bid was based on $31.05 per thousand on the Douglas fir and pine and the appraised price on the other species group. Other bidders were Round Prairie Lumber Co. of Dillard, Oregon Veneer Co. of White City, Fir-Ply Inc. of Medford and Herbert Lumber Co. of Riddle.

Next Umpqua National Forest timber sales are scheduled Monday.

Nursing Assistant Jobs Open At Vets' Hospital

The U.S. Civil Service board at the Roseburg Veterans Hospital is accepting applications for employment as "nursing assistant."

To qualify for these positions, it is necessary for applicants to pass a written test given at the hospital, officials said. The job pays $3,560 per year.

Because of the type of work performed, applications will be accepted from men only. Anyone interested in applying can obtain an application form from the local Post Office, the Oregon Department of Employment or by contacting the personnel division at the VA Hospital.

atmosphere for negotiations," actor Marion Brando said. Brando, Anthony Franciosa, William Frye and Paul Newman, whose wife Joanne Woodward, is from Thomasville, Ga., arrived in Alabama Thursday.

"We're trying as concerned, interested citizens to see if we can be of any help in setting up a line of communications between the Negro community and the white community," Newman said. All four of the actors addressed the rally of more than 1,000 Negroes. Brando, who talked the longest got the loudest cheers.

There were no incidents during the mass rally in the Union Methodist Church.

Other racial developments: New York: A policeman's arm was broken and Mayor Robert Wagner became infuriated when civil rights demonstrators chained themselves together on the steps of City Hall protesting alleged job discrimination.

Charleston, S.C.: A federal judge ordered 13 public schools integrated in September. The order signalled the end of grade and high school segregation in the state.

High Point, N.C.: Nearly 100 Negroes staged the third night of anti-segregation marches. There were no arrests and no incidents. About 250 white spectators viewed the march.

Chicago: Negro parents and the city board of education agreed on a program which they hoped would ease racial tensions on Chicago's South Side.

Plaquemine, La.: A federal court order banning demonstratrions resulted in a calming atmosphere and ended, at least temporarily, a series of desegregation protests.

St. Augustine, Fla.: Nine Negroes were arrested in sit-ins in the nation's oldest city.

New York: A group of Negroes announced they planned to establish an all-Negro political party with a slate of candidates for the 1964 general election. It would be called the "Freedom Now Party."

Melrose Church Camp Program Said Successful

The last of three groups of young persons from the Melrose Community Church have returned to their homes following a stay at the Fir Point Camp near Glendale. According to the Rev. Glenn Davis, church pastor, the total of 47 is the largest group from the church ever to attend the camp.

This year marks the first time, also that the church has sent its youth to camp in three separate age brackets, with senior and junior high students split up according to age. The experiment has proved highly successful, Davis reported.

On the camp staff from the Melrose church were the Rev. Mr. Davis who served as teacher and counselor; Mrs. Elsie Isakson, camp cook, with Mrs. Dean Gausnell assisting her the second week of the three-week session; Mrs. Mary Sanders, camp treasurer; Mrs. Hazel Krohn, transportation chairman; and Mrs. Carol Aremmeier, promotional chairman. Mrs. Barbara Nay, newcomer to the community recently, also assisted with cooking for part of the sessions.

Camp director was Glenn Goddard, who for many years has been the American Sunday School Union missionary in the Roseburg area.

The Rev. Richard Denham, formerly of Glendale and now a missionary on furlough from Brazil, was the missionary speaker. He was accompanied by his two daughters, Mary Ann and Delza, foster children of the Denhams and both from Brazil. Dwight Kinman, a chaplain at the University of Oregon Medical School in Portland, was the camp evangelist.

Home Life In Soviet Union, Too, Finds Hubby Helps With Dishes

NEW YORK (UPI)—Home life in the Soviet Union resembles home life in the U.S.A. to the extent that the Russian husband, too, helps with the dishes.

So reports Mrs. Florence W. Low, president of the American Home Economics Association. Mrs. Low and 84 other U.S. home economists have just returned from a visit to the Soviet Union.

Almost everything we saw pointed to a kind of home life that is very much like our own," said Mrs. Low. "They even teach home economics in the Soviet schools."

She said the group learned that Russian husbands do, at times, help with the dishes and housecleaning; that many Soviet women have sewing machines and make their own clothes; that a Soviet woman does not necessarily work outside the home; that home-cooked meals are the rule for most families; and that apartment rentals can be as low as $5 per month.

But generally, the home economists found high prices and poor quality, compared with the United States, on USSR food, clothing and equipment.

Mrs. Low told a news conference here that a "Sputnik food store" (a sort of supermarket), the price of butter was $1.50 a pound; the cheapest kind of cold cuts were $1 a pound; and fresh fruits and vegetables were conspicuous by their absence.

Pricing clothing at a Moscow department store, the group discovered the reason for the shoddy appearance of most Muscovites. A bra at $5, an underslip at $12, and men's sports shirts starting at $3 obviously were out of range for most Soviet families, where individual earnings average about $100 per month, they said.

One member of the tour, Helen Strow, Washington, D.C., said the stores were jammed with people doing more looking than buying.

"The curious thing is that people there didn't seem to be frustrated by the gap between current prices and the capacity to buy," said Miss Strow. "Apparently they are willing to wait until a future day when all this may be within the range of the family income."

Regional Forester Makes Local Visit

J. Herbert Stone, Portland, regional forester, viewed Umpqua National Forest progress in road construction and sale of Freida blowdown timber during a visit here earlier in the week.

Umpqua Supervisor Vondis Miller said he accompanied Stone on a forest inspection jaunt which took the pair up through the Little River District, along the divide of the North and South Umpqua rivers and down to Toketee where they stayed for a night.

Wednesday the two forest officials visited Lemolo and Diamond lakes.

Stone was also in attendance at a meeting of district rangers and members of the supervisor's staff held in Roseburg. Miller described this as a "work session" where forest organization, operation and finances were discussed. During the overnight stay at Toketee, the two officials were on hand for a group session which gathered members of the Diamond Lake Ranger District staff.

Stone is forester for Region 6 which comprises 19 national forests in Oregon and Washington.

Mankind Gets Request To Permit Survival Of Vanishing Species

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Biologists issued a plea today in behalf of "vanishing species."

They addressed it to earth's fiercest predator, man. They appealed to his economic self-interest, to his moral sense, and to the delight and scientific knowledge he derives from creatures of the wild.

Nature has been evolving different forms of life for something like three billion years. Nature itself has doomed the great majority of species to extinction.

But it has let about 3,500 species of mammals, including man, and 8,000 species of birds survive to the present. In recent times the great extinguiser has been not nature but man.

In a symposium at the 18th international congress of zoology scientists said that in 99.9 per cent of the tragedies which wipe out whole species today man is the villain.

He kills off irreplaceable animal types either by direct slaughter or by destruction of habitats through stream pollution the felling of forests, or indiscriminate use of poisons.

Many of the 1,500 species of mammal in Africa are in danger. But the new African states are trying to save some of them. There are sound economic grounds for doing so.

In Africa, scientists have discovered, wild animals properly husbanded, can provide hungry man with more protein food on marginal lands than cattle grazing the same areas can produce.

In the opinion of Ian McTaggart Cowan of the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, there is a far more compelling reason for trying to save species now in jeopardy. Said Cowan:

"We don't own the world. We hold a life rental on it. It is our responsibility to turn it over to our descendants in at least as good condition as when we got it, preferably better."

So far man has destroyed 100 mammal and more than 100 bird species. In danger are 55 mammal, 100 fish, 48 bird, and six reptile species.

Man Asks Hearing On Check Charge

Shuford M. Stanford, 53, of 1346 SE Main, Roseburg, asked for a preliminary hearing when arraigned in District Court Thursday on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses.

District Judge Gerald Hayes set the hearing for 2 p.m. today. The defendant was released from custody on his own recognizance. He was represented at his appearance by attorney Randolph Stocum.

Stanford is charged with presenting a $20 check to Keith's Chevron Service in Roseburg in exchange for merchandise and cash without having money deposited in the bank on which the check was written.

Donald Lyle Crosier, 19, Rt. 2, Roseburg, also requested preliminary hearing when arraigned in District Court on a charge of "willfully and maliciously setting fire to the forest." This hearing, too, was set for today.

Crosier is being held in custody with bail set at $2,500.

Crosier, in another action against him, has pleaded innocent to a charge of larceny of personal property valued less than $75 and the case was continued for court trial slated today.

In the only Circuit Court criminal action Thursday, the case in which Kenneth Francis Eckley is charged with larceny of personal property valued at more than $75 was dismissed on a motion of the district attorney.
