

TV 'FORM' FALSE HOPE

Volunteer To Make Mine Hole Descent

SHEPPTON, Pa. (UPI) — State deputy mines chief Gordon Smith said today a volunteer would descend more than 300 feet underground Sunday in a search for missing miner Louis Bova.

High-speed drills continued to reach out a rescue hole to Bova's presumed location. Smith said if no obstacles were encountered, a man would be lowered at the end of a rope about 6 p.m. Sunday.

Bova, 52, buried in an Aug. 13 cave-in along with David Fellin and Henry Throne, has not been heard from since Aug. 20. The other two were rescued early last Tuesday.

A tense silence descended on this dusty valley Friday and on the men who have tirelessly probed the ground for Bova when H. Beecher Charnbury, state secretary of mines, reported that a television camera lowered into an escape hole had picked up what seemed to be the form of a man.

That silence lasted until late in the day when Charnbury emerged from a tent after a conference with Andy Debrikko, who had been lowered into the hole to investigate. Charnbury reported to a crowd of more than 100:

Concrete Plug

"It was a concrete plug, along with a piece of rope. It could easily give the appearance of a body, we are very proud that we have men like Andy who are willing to go down there and look around."

Debrikko walked off, and the drills which had been silent all day suddenly went into operation again, filling the night with the whining that meant Louis Bova, alive or dead, still was to be located deep in the earth.

When Charnbury first saw the television image, he had reported excitedly that it seemed to show "a miner's hat, head, shoulders, arms, legs, and boots. The body appeared to be in a sitting position against a post."

Hope Is Revived

The picture had been taken in the 305-foot-deep hole through which Fellin and Throne were rescued, and though they reported no communication with Bova since Aug. 20, it was believed the third man might have crawled into the chamber after their escape.

When Bova's brothers Daniel and John saw the image and reported "it's possible, it's possible," excitement mounted at the lonely mine here. Shortly the number of spectators began to grow.

Then Dist. Atty. Harry Lightstone made an appearance at the mine site. "I've been informed there is a body down there," he said, "so I am here in my official capacity. I'm putting every one on notice that there could possibly be something in my jurisdiction."

More television pictures were to be attempted today, and the drilling continued unabated, but the chances for the survival of Louis Bova were privately considered slim by almost all observers here.

Umpqua Hotel Converts Rooms To Apartments

A portion of the Umpqua Hotel in downtown Roseburg will take on a new look early in October when 16 new apartments become ready for occupancy.

Hotel owner and manager Emil Ramberg said the Todd Building Co. should have the 16 apartments ready for occupancy within six weeks. There will be four of the small apartments, each complete with kitchens and dinettes, on each of the hotel's four floors.

All will provide elevator service, maid and linen services and a telephone, he said. Nine of the apartments will have separate bedrooms and living rooms, along with a kitchen and bath, while the other seven will be bachelor apartments featuring kitchenettes, a combination living and sleeping room, and bath.

Total cost of the remodeling project, including new kitchen furnishings, will be about $50,000. The entire hotel was remodeled in 1960, following the Aug. 7, 1959 blast.

Ramberg said the apartment policy is being adopted by hotels in several sections of the country. He emphasized the Umpqua Hotel will continue normal hotel occupancy, featuring 86 rooms for regular hotel guests.

Fewer Travel Aids Suggested For JFK

BERRYVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., suggested today that President Kennedy might set a good example for government economy by curtailing the White House transportation fleet.

Byrd delivered a broad indictment of the Kennedy administration's programs in a speech pre-

"The President is a busy man and he must be able to move and act quickly, and I certainly do not begrudge him any recreation he is able to find," Byrd said.

"But consider the land, sea and air transportation available to the White House."

He said this transport included 10 twin-jet helicopters costing $15 million apiece, an $8 million 707 fan-jet, three other 707's assigned to the White House by the Air Force, an Air Force DC-8B for airports unable to handle jets, a 21-foot Lincoln and three other family cars along with secret service cars and the regular White House auto fleet, a special railroad car, two yachts and another available from the Navy and a Coast Guard yawl.

"Maybe all of this is necessary but somehow or another it seems to me that the President could set an example by getting along with a little less," Byrd said.

In a sweeping indictment of Kennedy's tax program, Byrd termed it "irresponsible and dangerous."

He predicted that passage of the tax bill would boost the federal debt to $325 billion within three years.

Byrd said presidential proposals for increased government spending had ignored almost no areas of domestic activity.

"Federal expenditures could and should be reduced," Byrd said. "If they were reduced substantially, I would be among the first to give serious consideration to reducing taxes. Taxes are too high and they should be cut."

He said constructive tax reduction would be sure to come if unnecessary federal spending were stopped.

Boys Apprehended On Liquor Count

Three Sutherlin area boys were turned over to juvenile authorities, an 18-year-old was sentenced to serve time in jail and fined, and an older man is awaiting trial in connection with liquor charges earlier this week.

Awaiting trial on a charge of furnishing liquor to a minor is Walter Linstead, 27, Sutherlin. Trial is set for 3 p.m. Sept. 6. Charles LeRoy Slayton, 18, Sutherlin, was fined $70 and $5 costs and sentenced to 15 days in the county jail for illegal possession of alcohol by a minor.

Investigating sheriff's deputies and a liquor control officer report a call came from a resident of the Sutherlin area that some boys had hidden something in a culvert near the intersection of Plat M. Road and Highway 225.

The evidence was obtained by the officers along with a description of the car used.

A car answering the description later was stopped in that vicinity. The four youth occupants had another case of beer. On questioning they told the story that two of them had gotten the older man to buy the first case of beer for them and had hidden it in the culvert. When they returned to find it gone, they picked up two other youths and induced the man to purchase another case. It was this they had in their car, they told officers.

FBI To Attempt Identification

MOAB, Utah (UPI) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation today hoped to link the names of the 18 victims of Tuesday's potash mine explosion with the row of charred bodies lying on stretchers in a truck repair shop just outside of town.

Sheriff John Stocks, who knew most of the victims personally, said that visual identification was impossible. Each corpse was wrapped in a green plastic canvas and the stretchers were placed in a row on the cement floor of the shop, which was converted into a temporary morgue.

An FBI disaster squad, armed with fingerprint samples mainly taken from the victims' military records in Washington, arrived in Grand Junction, Colo., by air Friday night and expected to complete the trip here by motor car today.

Leonard Blaylock, special agent of the FBI's Salt Lake branch office, said that when the bodies are identified, they will be turned over to their families. Separate arrangements will be made for each.

Father John Rasbach, a Roman Catholic priest, said a joint Requiem Mass for the Catholics involved will be held in Moab if the families wish it.

Meanwhile, the Junior Chamber of Commerce of this eastern Utah city of 6,000 Friday night launched a fund drive for the victims' widows and children.

The Texas Gulf Sulphur Company's mine here was closed pending a federal-state investigation into the cause of the blast, which trapped 25 men more than a half-mile below the surface.

Seven survived the disaster. Two were brought out Wednesday and five more Thursday night after oxygen had been pumped into the mine to clear out the accumulated carbon monoxide.

A full scale investigation was ordered by the U.S. Interior Department after Marling J. Ankeny, director of the Bureau of Mines, said corrective measures had been recommended to the construction firm, Harrison International Inc., of Miami, Fla., a Canadian firm.

Glendale Man Makes It When He Can't Find What He Wants

By MRS. GERALD B. FOX
Glendale Correspondent

When Ivan C. Marriott of Sacramento, Calif., and Glendale wants something special, he builds it. His latest piece of equipment is a home-built, but factory perfect horizontal hydraulic drilling rig.

Marriott, who owns the "Old Glendale Junction" tourist court property three miles east of Glendale, lives there during the summer in a housecar—another of his Marriott "specials."

A year ago, Marriott, a active retiree, helped a neighbor put in two large concrete water storage tanks on the hillside across the highway from his property. Together they cleaned the spring, but the water was 90 feet away from the property and across a busy secondary highway. He didn't know of any equipment that could make a horizontal bore, and had dug across the highway was difficult and expensive.

There was only one thing to do and that was to build his own equipment, so he went to work during his winter in Sacramento. When he returned to Glendale he had his portable rig towed to Oregon.

A backhoe was obtained to cut a trench to start the bore, and in six hours time the drill had penetrated the entire 90 feet under the road, was withdrawn and dismantled. The drill came within a foot of its destination and two feet lower than planned.

Marriott, 62, and retired, was formerly employed by the McClatchy Broadcasting Co. of Sacramento and Fresno. Retirement has made it possible for him to follow a natural bent for mechanical projects.

Marriott and his wife are parents of Clyde Marriott, owner and operator of the Capitol Hill business development on Highway 99 at the Glendale Junction.
