World Of The Negro Intellectual Shown In Fine Story Collection

"Soon, One Morning" is a collection of the writings of American Negroes. It contains well-known published works, short stories by a Pulitzer Prize winner and the work of several younger Negro authors. The book has been compiled with biographical notes by Herbert Hill.

Opens Window

This collection of the work of Negro writers opens a window on the world of the Negro intellectual in the United States today. Several of those represented in this volume are recognized as major American literary figures.

Much of "Soon, One Morning," however, consists of brilliant and exciting writing never before published. From James Baldwin come five striking unpublished letters about the alienation of an American Negro living in France.

Among the large selection of unpublished material are fascinating chapters from the original, longer version of Ralph Ellison's "Invisible Man," five bizarre episodes about Negroes living in Paris from the last, unfinished novel of Richard Wright, and Horace Cayton's account of a well-intentioned picnic with Sinclair Lewis.

By OSWALD JACOBY

In the course of a motor trip through the West this summer, Mrs. Jacoby and I spent several delightful days in Laramie, Wyo. We had the pleasure of playing duplicate with the Laramie Unit while but there was considerable danger that I would only go to six diamonds, but that danger was averted quickly. I felt in the mood for fireworks and jumped to seven diamonds.

The play was short, but quite good. Mrs. Jacoby drew two rounds of trumps, cashed my ace of hearts and her king, ruffed a heart, returned to her hand with the ace of spades, ruffed another heart, took my ace of clubs, ruffed a club to get back to her hand, pulled West's last trump and claimed the rest of the tricks.

What do you do now?
A—Bid four spades. Your hand is worth nine points in spades and your partner has at least two spades for his opening no-trump.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Again you make the Jacoby transfer of two hearts over your partner's no-trump and he makes the automatic two-spade rebid. This time you hold:
