New Defendant Named In Suit

Roy W. Simmons has filed a complaint in Douglas County Circuit Court naming new defendants in a suit in which he seeks $50,000 general damages in connection with the Kellogg Bridge collapse on Sept. 22, 1961.

A loaded logging truck owned by Simmons was crossing the bridge when a span collapsed, causing the truck to drop into the river bed.

Named as defendants in the new complaint filed by Simmons are highway officials Walter G. Krueger, Douglas County division bridge superintendent; L. R. Chandler, division engineer in Roseburg for the state of Oregon; H. W. Hughlett, Oregon State bridge superintendent; and I. E. DeFrance, state maintenance engineer.

On Simmons' motion, the court has issued an order dismissing the truck owner's complaint against three previously named defendants. They were Delmar Wilson, Howard Roberts and John Doe Wright, employees of the state Highway Commission.

Plaintiff asks award of $4,100 for loss of truck and $50,000 for loss of plaintiff's business and logging operation. The complaint alleges the defendants were careless and negligent in matters of repair and maintenance for the bridge, in failing to provide proper support for the bridge while it was open to public use and in failing to close off the bridge to the public or place warning signs at the bridge entrance to indicate its dangerous condition.
