Four Nations Have Cut Ties With Dominica

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI)—Mexico and Bolivia Friday joined Costa Rica and Venezuela in cutting diplomatic ties with the Dominican Republic because of the military coup which deposed President Juan Bosch.

Provisional President Emilio De Los Santos promised Friday that Bosch's situation would be "defined" no later than today.

Bosch, elected last December, has been held prisoner in the presidential palace since he was overthrown Wednesday in a bloodless coup d'etat. He refused to leave the country or sign a resignation.

Mexico announced Friday the withdrawal of its diplomatic mission from Santo Domingo. This is tantamount to a break in relations. Mexico expresses its displeasure with regimes it disapproves by closing diplomatic missions.

Bolivia formally broke relations with the Dominican Republic.

Eduardo Sanchez, Dominican Ambassador to the organization of American States (OSA), resigned Friday night to protest the military takeover.

The three-man civilian junta installed by the military named a 13-man cabinet Friday, including former Defense Minister Maj. Gen. Victor O. Vinas Roman as armd forces secretary. Vinas was one of the leaders of the coup.

The other 12 cabinet members are civilians. The important Foreign Ministry post went to Donald Reid Cabral, a businessman and former member of the seven-man council of state which ruled the country from January, 1961, until Bosch was inaugurated last February. Reid is considered strongly pro-American.

ARMED DOMINICAN TROOPS climb aboard a truck after dispersing a group of rioters on a residential street in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic. The troops broke up the disturbance with tear gas, and a few shots were fired. There were no reports of injuries. There's No Bars In Whiskeytown Today, But President Kennedy Isn't To Blame

WHISKEYTOWN, Calif. (UPI)—President Kennedy is not to blame but because of that dam he's dedicating here today there are no bars in Whiskeytown.

When a Whiskeytowner wants a convivial drink, he must leave this little community with the ferocious name and make an embarassed appearance at some routine place like Redding, Calif., 10 miles east.

"It's quite a blow not to have a bar," said John William Roche, Whiskeytown's acting postmaster, keeper of its general store and former proprietor of its defunct saloon.

Roche closed the saloon because not even a man of his various talents could keep it going under 200 feet of water, which is where all of the old town went when the reservoir behind Whiskeytown Dam filled to its brim last month with 69.4 billion gallons of tame and limpid water.

Before the flood, Whiskeytown had a population of about 200 retired goldminers, loggers, cattlemen and other rambunctious folk. Now, at the new location, about one mile away on higher ground, there are 30. However, many of the former Whiskeytowners are still in the area, at next door communities like French Gulch.

Initially, Roche failed to rebuild the saloon alongside his new general store because of a tangle involving state licensing requirements. However, he now believes that the tangle can be unraveled.

But lately, as he views 11 miles of sparkling new lake, and sees its natural beauty and recreation potential, he has come to believe that a new drinking spot "couldn't be just a saloon."

The new place, he said, should be different from the old, which was often the scene of "fights, arguments, yelling and so forth." It should be a quiet bar, perhaps linked to a motel; the sort of place that would discourage "drinking on any scale."

"It should be," he said, "a place for all Americans, not just the drinking people."

Roche has not decided when he might build his all-American, Whiskeytown bar—for social drinkers only. But it will come sooner or later, he said.

When it's built, tourists will find the place about 230 miles northeast of San Francisco on the eastern slope of California's coastal mountains. It won't be far from the old ghost towns of Igo, Ono, Piety Hill, Muletown, Horsetown and One Horsetown. Nearby also are the still active communities of Hayfork and Peanut.

Gold miners founded the town in 1849 on the banks of Whiskey Creek, so-called, apparently, because someone once dropped a keg of the stuff in the water. When the post office opened in 1855, the town was known as both Whiskey Creek and Whiskeytown.

The post office closed nine years later, and when it reopened in 1881, postal authorities refused to accept the old name. They believed it lacked dignity.

During the next 71 years Whiskeytowners fought against such names as Franklin, Blair, Stell and Schilling. They won their battle in 1952 when Washington officially gave the place its present name.

Three years later, Congress authorized the dam that washed the old place away.

Jury Finds Caudill Guilty Of Assault

John Aaron Caudill, 24, of Roseburg, Friday was found guilty of assault by a trial jury in the court of Circuit Judge Don H. Sanders. The judge ordered a pre-sentence investigation before imposing sentence.

Caudill was being tried on a Grand Jury indictment charging him with assault with intent to commit rape. The jury, however, returned the simple assault conviction.

The case involved a Roseburg girl in an incident on Nov. 26, 1962. He was accused of going to the girl's apartment and attempting to force himself on her.

Caudill, on the stand, admitted that he had gone to the partment, but claimed it was at her invitation and that they had been having an affair up until this time. The girl denied that there had been anything between them.

The trial opened at 10 a.m. Thursday. The state rested its case Friday morning, and the defense rested just before lunch. The jury started deliberating at 1 p.m. and had its verdict at 2:44 p.m.

Caudill was acquitted on earlier trial of another case in which he had been accused of assault with intent to commit rape on another girl. Three other cases pend. Two are indictments charging burglary in connection with alleged entry of the two girls' homes. The third is on apeal of a conviction on an immoral practice charge in Municipal Court, involving his alleged going to the home of a married woman in the early hours of morning after her husband left on a fishing trip.

Forest Travel Heavy As Hunt Season Opens

It was a little early this morning to determine how many deer might be bagged in the hunting season opener.

But one thing was known for sure. There was no shortage of hunters in the hills.

Mrs. Arthur Selby, correspondent, said she was advised by Little River District forest personnel that 50 cars were parked at the end of the Twin Lakes Road this morning.

Twin Lakes is 40 miles east of Glide. There was also a substantial assemblage of tote goats and saddle horses in the area as hunters utilized every type of transportation available to get to the deer and pack them out.

The popular crooner's hat was blown off by a 60 mile-an-hour winds and when he tried to retrieve it a gust swept him off his feet.

Roseburg To Host Power Use Meeting

Roseburg in 1964 will host a "power use section workshop" of the Northwest Public Power Association.

Selection of Roseburg for next year's NPPA event was announced at Tillamook where the 1963 workshop was conducted this week.

Harold Backen, manager, and Harold Crinklaw, power use adviser, both with Douglas Electric Cooperative, Inc., spearheaded the effort to bring the event here. It was reported this will be the first time such an NPPA session has been held south of Eugene.

Bill Cook, Coquille, of the Coos-Curry Electric Coop, was named chairman for the 1964 session. The workshop deals with power use and public relations.

The local officials said 130 delegates representing 41 utilities attended the three-day Tillamook meeting which concluded Friday. Delegates represented power organizations in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and British Columbia, Canada.

The NPPA speaks for 120 utilities in the Northwest.

Quints Enter Third Week

ABERDEEN, S. D. (UPI) — The Fischer quintuplets, 2 weeks old today, may celebrate the occasion with another trip to the scales, their doctor said.

Dr. James Berbos, who delivered the four girls and a boy Sept. 14, said he anticipates the scales will show that each of the quints has gained weight.

"They are very active and filling out nicely," he said.

Three of the quints, James Andrew, Mary Catherine and Mary Margaret, are getting their meals out of bottles while their sisters, Mary Magdalene and Mary Ann get theirs by means of nose tubes.

Berbos declined to predict when Mary Magdalene and Mary Ann would become bottle babies.

The physician said it will be about two months more before the quints are ready to leave St. Lukes Hospital and join the five other Fischer children at Andrew Fischer's rented farm house outside Aberdeen.

Berbos said the quints are "all getting along fine" and he is confident all of them "will make it."

Plaintiffs Win Suit For Fire Damages

Plaintiffs Hayden L. and Jean Laurance were awarded damages of $14,000 against Wade Worthington, Robert Cassiday and Annie Cassidy on a Circuit Court trial before Judge Charles S. Woodrich, which concluded Friday with the jury verdict.

The judgment was for damage caused to the plaintiffs' property located five miles east of Canyonville. The complaint alleged that on April 14, 1962, the defendants, whose farm property, owned by the Cassidys and leased by Worthington, is located across from that of the plaintiffs, were burning brush and debris. The fire escaped onto the Laurances' property and destroyed their dwelling, cooler shed and trees and shrubs.

The Lawrences had asked for $19,400 damages to their home, $300 for the cooler shed, $500 for the trees and shrubs, and $5,400 for damage to personal property, for a total of $25,600.

Hunters Urged To Report Fires

Because of high fire danger, the Douglas Forest Protective Association today urged hunters to report to the DFPA any suspicious smoke they might see in the woods while out on the trail.

The DFPA feels that some fires which might be missed by the forest fire fighting agency would be seen by hunters who have fanned out over the county's forests. It was also emphasized that hunters building fires use extreme caution and douse them thoroughly when the site is vacated.

If smoke is seen, even though hunters have doubts about the seriousness, calls can be made to 673-4622 in Roseburg; JU 4-5362 in the Elkton area; 459-2733 at Sutherlin; 839-4611 at Canyonville and 837-5339 at Glendale.

The DFPA reported a camp fire which had not been thoroughly put out had caused a small fire on Green Butte near Azalea Friday.

The fire had apparently been left last Sunday. It had smoldered until the area dried out and then started spreading. It burned about a 19th of an acre but caused little damage to timber.

Foresters Ask Hunters To Use Care In Woods

By United Press International

The vanguard of more than 260,000 hunters expected to take to the woods during Oregon's general deer season began hunting when the season opened this morning.

The State Game Commission estimated about 100,000 deer will be killed during the season.

Forestry officials, noting increasing fire danger because of hot weather and low humidity, urged hunters to be careful in the forests.

All national forest land in the state remained open today except the Summar Lake Rim area in the Fremont National Forest and the Ashland watershed in the Rogue River National Forest.

Cloud Cover Mars Kennedy's Flight

By United Press International

President Kennedy's flight over the Oregon Dunes was marred by a cloud cover over much of the area, according to Sen. Neuberger and Rep. Duncan.

However, Mrs. Neuberger said Kennedy seemed very happy with what he did see of the area.

"Of course, it looked so flat from the air," she commented. She noted that Udall had taken a closer look at the area on a trip out here this spring. The proposed national seashore park would be under his administration.

Duncan quoted the President as expressing hope Congress would act on pending legislation to create a Dunes Park as soon as possible.

Both Duncan and Mrs. Neuberger have bills in the hopper to establish a federal reserve, but they differ in the location of boundaries. Mrs. Neuberger wants to take in much of the lake and forest area east of U.S. Highway 101. Duncan's bill is limited to the west side of the highway which is principally sand dunes, and does not extend as far south.

Duncan said the two bills are currently in committee and he expected a compromise measure to come out of the session soon.

Later, the President's sleek 707 jet circled the Rogue River project inspecting proposed sites for three dams in that watershed.

Ullman told reporters that in his talks with the chief executive the President "showed a far greater knowledge of western problems and needs than I could have guessed."

He said he was able to talk to Kennedy informally on Oregon problems, and added the President had asked him to prepare a brief of the state's water problems.

Morse and Duncan returned to Washington, D.C., after meeting newsmen here. Ullman and Mrs. Neuberger remained in the state over the weekend.

Sale Of Wheat To Reds Waits JFK's Return

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The administration is carefully weighing the pros and cons of selling surplus wheat to Russia, and appears to be finding more pros.

A final decision on the matter probably will be delayed until after President Kennedy returns from his western tour Monday. Until then officials are maintaining a watchful silence.

The State Department said it was reviewing its export policy in anticipation of a formal Soviet offer to buy American wheat, but officials stressed that no such offer had been received as yet.

Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman, commenting on the contention from some quarters that selling wheat to the Communists might bolster their shaky economy, noted that it also might help the U.S. economy, especially in the area of the balance of payments deficit.

A group of private U.S. grain traders, who met at Ottawa with a Soviet trade delegation this week, said they were confident the administration would approve the sale of surplus wheat to the Russians at world prices.

The world market price for wheat is about 50 cents lower than the U.S. domestic price, which is supported by federal subsidy.

Burton Joseph, president of L. S. Joseph, Inc., of Minneapolis, and his group left Ottawa Friday because there was no expectation of a decision on possible wheat sales until President Kennedy's return to Washington.

He would neither confirm nor deny a published report that the Russians were offering $250 million in dollars and gold for 3 million tons of wheat.

James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, conferred with White House aides on the situation Friday. He was reported to have urged the administration to decide in favor of the proposed sale.

The administration and Congress have traditionally opposed the sale of federally subsidized surplus goods to "unfriendly" Communist bloc nations. Nothing in law specifically prohibits such sales for cash. But it is interpreted as banning extension of long-term credits to nations which have defaulted on earlier obligations.

Crunican Paces Roseburg Win

With Mike Crunican leading the way, the Roseburg High School country team waltzed off with top honors in both the varsity and junior varsity divisions at Crater High School in Central Point Friday.

Crunican won the meet with a time of 9:39 over the 1.8-mile course. His time set a new record, making him the record holder in all three of the meets in which he has participated this year.

Roseburg's varsity score was 23 to Crater's 32. (Points are given according to placing in the meet, and the lowest point total spells the victory.)

Following Crunican in the varsity division were Bill McClung, second, with a time of 10:17; Lloyd Veach, fifth; Don Delaney, seventh; and John Gutierrez, eighth.

The junior varsity won by a score of 18-37 over the same course. Darrell Elliott of Roseburg was first with a time of 11.4. The next four places went to Gale Welker, Jack Keith, Mike Chartier and Duane King, in that order.

Front Door Stolen From Local Residence

No task is too difficult for a truly ambitious thief.

This was proven in Roseburg the other night when a culprit stole the front door off a residence at 1827 NE Diamond Lake Blvd.

The theft was reported to Roseburg City Police by Maurice R. Daugherty. Daugherty said he had recently moved out of the house and had removed most of his belongings with the exception of a few things in the garage and basement.

He said he noticed the door missing as he was driving down the street. Nothing else in the house was missing, indicating the culprit had eyes only for the door. Police are seeking possible witnesses to the theft.

The police officer in charge said he would like to be contacted "if anyone sees a stray door running around."

Police Probe Woman's Complaint Of Assault

Roseburg City Police today were investigating a local woman's complaint that she was the victim of a possible assault attempt Friday night.

The woman told officers she and her mother-in-law were walking east on SE Oak Ave. near the Roseburg Armory when a man came up from behind and grabbed the complainant around the neck.

The mother-in-law chased the attacker away, the complainant told the police. The woman said a paper bag she was carrying was torn during the scuffle.

Police were told the man was wearing work clothes and a hat. Investigation is continuing.

Accident Victim Moved

David L. Welker, 21, of Roseburg, who was seriously injured last week in a traffic accident at Redding, Calif., has been transferred from a Redding hospital to the U.S. Naval Hospital, Ward 76 B, Oak Knoll, Oakland, Calif., for further treatment.

Welker, a Navy man, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Welker of Roseburg.

Army Couple Hurt In Curtin Crash

A U.S. Army corporal and his wife were injured early this morning when their car went off the highway south of Curtin and smashed into a piece of construction equipment.

Taken to a Cottage Grove hospital were Cpl. Adolph E. Denson, 31, who was being transferred to Fort MacArthur, Calif., from an Alaskan post, and his wife, Valerie, 34.

According to Eugene State Police, Denson suffered a broken leg and other undetermined injuries and the wife suffered possible back injuries. The Negro couple's 10-year-old son was not hurt.

Condition of the victims was reported "fair" at the Cottage Grove hospital this morning.

The accident occurred about 5 a.m. on U.S. Highway 99 about six miles south of Curtin. Investigating officers said the vehicle, driven by Denson, was proceeding south when it left the surface of the highway, traveled 150 feet along the bank on the west side of the road and then crashed into a parked ditch digger.

Officers said the 10-year-old boy had difficulty getting help from passing traffic. It was reported he signaled several vehicles before a car finally stopped. State police said this was possibly because the accident scene was out of view from the highway and motorists might have thought the boy was a hitchhiker.

Denson was pinned in the car—a 1957 sedan—and it was necessary to tear out a front seat of the vehicle to remove him, officers reported.

Officers said it was indicated the accident occurred as a result of the driver falling asleep.

County Planners Table Request For Rezoning Winchester Area

The Douglas County Planning Commission meeting in general session this week, weighed the results of a hearing, held earlier in the evening on a rezoning petition filed by Jack Doyle for property in Winchester No. 2 zoning area.

The commission tabled the matter until further data has been presented.

The hearing concerned the petition of Doyle, under authorization of the land owner, L. F. Gillam, to rezone the property so he could make use of it as a car wrecking business.

Property Zoned

The property is zoned as agriculture. The request in the petition asked for a Commercial — 3 classification for the portion of property fronting on U.S. Highway 99 BR to a depth of approximately 1,200 feet, and a variance or special allowance on the area lying behind the requested commercial zone.

Several protests were voiced. Arthur Crocker, who owns and resides on property immediately adjacent to the area protested the proposed use of the property. Joe Weckerle, speaking as president of the Winchester Civic Club, and other residents of the area also voiced protests.

Eldon Caley, attorney representing Doyle, spoke in behalf of the petition and pointed out the desire of Doyle to do everything possible to make his operation of a car wrecking business as inoffensive as possible. Caley contended that the operation as proposed by Doyle would not result in a general devaluation of local properties as claimed by the opponents.

Following the hearing the commission called to order its general session and tabled the petition temporarily.

It considered a petition for a zone change in the Keasey-Calkins Zoning District filed by Domenico and Dr. Harvey ring for a change from residential to agriculture. The properties lie in the lower portion of Keasey Road area. The commission moved to proceed with legal advertising and scheduled a public hearing for the October meeting.

A road vacation petition was found to be faulty and was referred back to the petitioners.

Police Investigate Three Auto Thefts

Three Friday night automobile thefts in Douglas County were being investigated today by Roseburg State Police.

A 1949 auto owned by Melvin Coldwell of Rt. 4, Roseburg, came up missing at U.S. Plywood Corp. and a 1942 two-door sedan was taken at Roseburg Lumber Co., the latter vehicle owned by James Harold Breeden, Rt. 1, Roseburg.

The Breeden vehicle was found abandoned later this morning north of Myrtle Creek. The other two cars were still missing.

Investigating officers said that in each theft, drivers had left ignition keys in the vehicles.

Police also reported that a 1960 car reportedly stolen from Portland had been found abandoned at Curtin.
