South Needed Just a Peek

(Written For NEA)
By OSWALD JACOBY

Some hands are mighty easy to play when you are looking at all the cards and very hard to play when all you see are your own hand and dummy's.

North was one of those players who refuse ever to open a four card major suit, so he selected one diamond for his opening bid. South jumped to three diamonds and, after North tried three spades, South gambled it out at three no-trump.

West decided the best chance to beat the hand would be a club opening and he placed the deuce of clubs on the table. East's jack lost to South's king and it was up to South to take it from there.

As you can plainly see, South can run off four spades and four hearts and leave the last four tricks for the defense, but South was only looking at his own hand and North's. No one had told South that the hearts were going to break and that clubs would not.

He cashed two hearts just to see what would happen. There was a

1♠	Double	Redouble	2♣
Pass	Pass	4♦	Pass

You, South, hold:

What do you do now?

A—Unless you want absolute sure things, bid seven spades. Your partner holds only one king. If it is the heart king, the grand slam will wrap up. If it is the club king (very unlikely) you will still have a finesse for seven.

chance to drop the jack, but that it failed, South was right back to his original position.

He finally concluded that West's deuce of clubs had been fourth best and that he could afford to lead a diamond instead of a third heart. Needless to say, he was wrong. West grabbed his ace of diamonds and played ace and another club to let his partner bring in the rest of the suit.

Dear Abby! She's Got A Solution!

— By ABIGAIL VANBUREN —

DEAR ABBY: What good are laws? I'll tell you. They are good for the lawyers. The judge says a divorced man must pay so much alimony and child support. The man doesn't do it, so the woman has to go back to her lawyer and pay him to try to get her money for her. The divorced man says, "Okay, put me in jail and you'll get nothing!" Now, is that fair? Here is my plan. Instead of putting these men in jail full-time, why don't they sentence them to "jobs" on evenings and week-ends so they won't have all that free time to run around and spend the money they agreed to pay their ex-wives? How do I start the ball rolling?

DEAR BITTER: In some circumstances the law permits a garnishment of wages, which means you get your share whether he likes it or not. If this relief fails, let the man test his bluff in jail on a charge of non-support. I'll betcha he won't repeat.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young woman. I have been told I am very attractive. I recently took a job running an elevator in what is supposed to be a high class office building. I would rather not go into detail, but I would like to know if it is really against the law to hit a man with glasses.

DEAR GOING: Yes—unless, of course, you hit with a police court warrant for tampering with an elevator jockey.

DEAR ABBY: I understand that most men have a streak of jealousy in them, but my husband is impossible. He wakes me up at five o'clock in the morning to question me because he DREAMT I was chasing around with men all over the city. Abby, I am an ordinary-looking, middle-aged woman with three small children to look after, and I tell you I am not interested in any other men. I can't even go to church for fear of being accused of going somewhere else. My nerves are shot trying to stay sane for the children. I've never given my husband any reason to distrust me. He says he acts this way because he LOVES me. Is this love?

NERVOUS

DEAR NERVOUS: Your husband's jealousy has nothing to do with "love." Suspicious based on fantasy are a symptom of mental illness.

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem (any more) but I have some advice for young women. When you meet a man who says he is married "in name only" but isn't heel enough to divorce his wife because she is "sickly"—watch out! I fell for that line for two years. One evening while Mr. "No Heel" and I were barbecuing in my back yard his wife paid us an unexpected visit. She was so "sickly" that she picked up this 180-pound man and sailed him across the yard. He landed on his head and broke his collarbone. Sincerely yours,

HELENE
