

School Lunch Program Involves Much Preparation, Lots Of Food

Did you know that for a holiday lunch in the Roseburg schools, a total of 30 turkeys (1,250 pounds) is consumed by youngsters.

This indication enough that school lunches in the Roseburg system involves a major production and a lot of food every day.

Next week, that program will be recognized during National School Lunch Week, Oct. 13-19.

The theme of the week is "School Lunch Serves the Nation—Through Food for Learning."

In Roseburg, a total 2,937 lunches are served in the lunch rooms of the schools. In addition, 947 youngsters take part in the special milk program daily. Handling this food are 34 cooks and helpers and seven substitutes. Most of the employees belong to the Oregon School Food Service Association, which is designed to upgrade the standards for quality food service. Heading the program is coordinator Pauline Bagwell.

There are three basic requirements for school participation in the school lunch program. They are (1) that the lunch room be operated on a non-profit basis, (2) that free or reduced-price lunches be provided for children unable to pay full price; and (3) that lunches meet a basic standard.

That standard calls for provision of at least one-third minimum daily food requirements of the basic food for good health.

Menus are made up a month at a time, so better variety of menus can be introduced. This also allows maximum use of donated commodities and helps control food costs.

The lunches are offered at a minimum price, so they will be in the price range of almost any family. Elementary pupils pay 25 cents; junior high pupils 30 cents; and adults 40 cents. The government pays 4 cents a pint for milk and free lunches are provided for children unable to pay. No government reimbursement is made on adult lunches.

The lunches go to all schools in the district, except the high school, where no facilities are available. Food is transported to Melrose, Riversdale and Eastwood.

Baker's Dealings Build Political Fires In Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The resignation of Senate Democratic Secretary Robert G. (Bobby) Baker eased political pressures and potential senatorial embarrassment today.

But there was no certainty that the political fire his outside business deals built in the senate cloakroom had been entirely smothered.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., who had launched a one-man inquiry into Baker's financial interests in a food vending firm serving government contractors, would not say whether he would drop his investigation.

The FBI also is investigating the vending firm with which Baker had ties. Sources said the inquiry had been expanded.

Gave Up Job

Baker gave up a $19,000 job, but his wife, Dorothy, who is on the Senate internal security subcommittee staff at $11,800 a year, apparently was remaining. Both are listed as principals in the controversial vending firm.

The Baker affair, said one ranking Republican, was almost certain to be discussed at today's Senate GOP policy lunch meeting. But he indicated that if the GOP made any public follow-up move, it would not be likely to come for several days.

Republican and Democratic senators alike were frankly concerned that publicity about the former page boy's interests in the food vending, motel and insurance fields might prove embarrassing to the Senate.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., who announced Baker's resignation, said "his great ability and his dedication to the majority and to the Senate will be missed." Mansfield voiced his deep regret at losing Baker.

Suffered A Loss

Politically, no one on either side of the aisle doubted that the Democrats had suffered a real working loss.

Baker, who started as a Senate page at 14 and became majority secretary at 26, kept the Senate Democratic voting machinery oiled and ready to go.

He reached his peak under the tutelage of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson when the Texas was Democratic whip and then majority leader.

A native of Pickens, S.C., the 35-year-old Baker provided a working "bridge" between Senate Northern liberals and Southern conservatives. His primary job was to keep tab on votes, the whereabouts and needs of Democratic senators. In actual practice, he was often a key adviser on legislative strategy for the Democrats.

Mansfield named Francis R. Valeo, his own 47-year-old leadership assistant, to fill Baker's place for the time being.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — King plans new moves in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. today began putting the machinery in motion to back up his threats of "bigger than ever" demonstrations if this city does not bow to Negro desegregation demands.

Also scheduled for this afternoon was the trial of three white men arrested by police investigating racial bombings here. They were charged with the misdemeanor of illegal possession of dynamite.

Kings' "task force" which led some of the largest protests in Southern history here last spring planned a "non-violent workshop" this afternoon and the Southern integration leader was to address another mass rally tonight.

The workshops and mass meetings were launching pads for the demonstrations last April and May in which King and more than 2,500 other persons were jailed in marches and sit-ins met by police with fire hoses and police dogs.

"If the conditions that brought on the dynamiting and the death of four beautiful little girls are not changed we will put on our walking shoes and demonstrate all over town," King said.

"Birmingham is the temple for segregation," he said. "We must turn on the temple."

Charles Cagle, 22, R. E. Chambliss, 59, both whites with Ku Klux Klan backgrounds, and John Hall, 36, were to go on trial in city court on charges of conspiracy for violation of the city ordinances could result in $100 fines and 180 days in jail.

Selma, Ala. More than 200 Negroes stood in line outside the Dallas County Courthouse to register to vote. An estimated 35 applications were received by registrars. A reporter, photographer and three photographers said they were roughed up by officers while attempting to take picture at the courthouse.

Plaquemine, La. Police used tear gas Monday to break up a protest march by about 400 Negro high school students. There were no injuries or arrests.

Orangeburg, S. C. More than 100 Negroes were arrested Monday for defying a ban against racial demonstrations. The arrests boosted the number of such jailings to 1,443.

Oxford, Miss. Following a year of racial turmoil on its campus, the University of Mississippi Monday reported its first enrollment decrease in more than a decade.

Greensboro, N. C. An anti-segregation picketline was slated to be thrown up in front of a motel here today following a similar protest staged Monday night, the first such demonstration in the Gate City since June 6.

Oregon Baptist Convention Opens In Roseburg Tuesday

Three great world issues will take the spotlight at the 75th annual session of the Oregon Baptist Convention to convene in Roseburg at the First Baptist Church next week.

The three-day convention starts next Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. The theme will be "To Serve the Present Age." The three issues to be discussed are race relations, world peace and relations between church and state.

Women To Host

During the convention, women of the church will host women of Oregon on Women's Day, Tuesday. Theme for the day will be "A Woman's Witness in This Age."

Featured speaker will be Dr. Dwight S. Dodson, executive secretary of the Oregon Baptist Convention, who has just returned from a trip touring the mission fields. He will speak at the noon luncheon at the church on a subject titled "An Eye Witness to Modern Missions."

During the other convention sessions, three speakers have been named to keynote the discussions on the great issues involved.

The Rev. John Jackson, pastor-elect of Mt. Olivet Baptist Church in Portland (a Negro church) will speak on "Serving the Present Age Through Improved Race Relations." Following his presentation, an open forum discussion and contributions from three reactors are planned. The three are the Rev. Charles Moore, pastor of the Grant Park Baptist Church in Portland; Dr. DeNorval Unthank, Negro physician from Portland; and the Rev. George Dick, executive secretary of the Oregon Council of Churches.

Stassen Due

On Wednesday evening, former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen, who was appointed by President Eisenhower to head up the concerted effort of our government toward international peace, will speak on the theme "World Peace." A discussion will also follow his report.

That afternoon at 2:15, Dr. Frank Kepper, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Long Beach, Calif.,

Smith Will Attend Agricultural Meet

Chauncey W. Smith of Roseburg will attend a meeting of the Pacific Northwest Section of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers in Portland Oct. 16-19.

Smith, who recently moved to Roseburg, is a retired agricultural engineer from the University of Nebraska where he was associated with the school's department of agricultural engineering for 37 years.

At the Portland session, Smith will attend technical meetings relating to agriculture.

Following his retirement from the University of Nebraska in 1955, Smith served as a consultant with the state Department of Education in Ohio. His services included direction over a series of workshops on tractor maintenance. He also taught one year at Ohio State University in the department of agricultural engineering.

The new resident arrived in Roseburg on Aug. 21 and is making his residence at the Umpqua Hotel. His son, Roger F. Smith, teaches physics at Roseburg High School.

Doctors Waging Silent Battle Against Botulism In Tennessee

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Doctors fought a silent battle against a little-known killer today — hoping they have caught it in time.

A prominent businessman and his 10-year-old daughter died

Monday. A university professor, his wife and two children lay ill with the same disease. A chemical engineer and his wife also fought for life.

The suspected killer was type "E" botulism. Rare but deadly, doctors and public health officials conferred through the night at University Hospital and called for scarce supplies of anti-toxin located in Washington and Canada.

David S. Cohen, 35, a vice president of the Berkleine Corp. of Morristown, Tenn., and Amy Beth Cohen, 10, died shortly before 8 a.m. Monday. Saturday morning they had eaten smoked whitefish bought at a Kroger Co. supermarket in West Knoxville and packed by Dornbos Bros. Fisheries of Grand Haven, Mich.

Ale Same Type

The others in the hospital had eaten the same type of smoked fish from the same store. Rudolph Paluzelle, 42, was in critical condition. Mrs. Lawrence Silverman, 39, and her two children, Matthew, 10, and Rachel, 8, were in serious condition. Paluzelle's wife and Mrs. Silverman's husband, a history teacher at the University of Tennessee, were in satisfactory condition.

Cohen and his daughter had been admitted to the hospital late Sunday night. No others in their family had eaten the fish.

Several others reported to Knoxville hospitals for observation.

Kroger ordered the suspected product removed from its 1,375 stores in 22 Southern and Midwestern states. The fishery was shut down while Michigan Agriculture Department investigators ran tests on its inventories.

"Horrible, Horrible Debacle"

"This is a horrible, horrible debacle," H. J. Dornbos, president of the firm, said.

Botulism, caused by the microorganism in improperly processed preserved foods, is fatal in two-thirds of the cases. It is hard to

Fiery Mme. Nhu Arrives In U.S.

Continuing picture coverage.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu, brimming with confidence but slightly conciliatory, arrived Monday night for a three-week visit to the United States with hopes of improving her own image and that of the South Viet Nam government.

Mme. Nhu, whose sharp criticisms of U.S. policies, officials and newsmen in her country have helped make her controversial, said she came here "to see you and to try to understand why we can't get along better."

"I feel this deeply, and I hope at the end of my stay that I may know," she said.

There was some strong congressional opposition to Mme. Nhu's visit.

Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, told the Senate that her visa should be cancelled and "she should be compelled to leave the country."

"Let her slander us from her native land or any other country, but not from our own soil," Young said.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., called her "a thorn in the fight for democracy around the world." He denounced her as an "irresponsible, arrogant woman" who has made statements that are "viciously anti-American."

The sister-in-law of South Viet Nam President Ngo Dinh Diem addressed a crowd of about 200 newsmen and photographers at Idlewild Airport after leaving the jetliner she and her pretty daughter, Le Thuy, 16, took from Paris.

Speaking in English, Mme. Nhu said that because she was a "controversial person" she did not intend to seek meetings with President Kennedy or other high-ranking government officials during her coast-to-coast tour.

She also denied that she was "power hungry" and said that she enjoyed the confidence of the Viet Nam government.

CDUF Workers Set Speedup In Drive

Central Douglas United Fund division leaders Monday noon agreed that they would try to "high ball" the fund raising effort by urging their workers to make their contacts as soon as possible.

About 39 per cent of the goal is complete, and the reports of collections which have come in have been good, but it was indicated the reports are coming in slowly.

Among the reports so far, percentage of contacts made were: Advanced gifts 58 per cent, business division 40 per cent and public employees 62 per cent. The residential campaign areas have been organized and the professional division is showing "surprisingly strong" results, it was reported.

Goal for the fund drive is $69,936, of which $25,803 had been raised by Monday noon. The report meeting was held at the Elks Temple.

COLLARS TOO BIG

WOLVERHAMPTON, England (UPI) — Pub-keeper Louis Mossop was fined $2.80 Monday for giving his customers only 19 fluid ounces of beer in a 20-ounce mug.

Mossop's plea that he cut down on the beer because his customers like a lot of foam on their drinks was rejected.
