Defense Gem For Thinkers

(Written For NEA)
By OSWALD JACOBY

Here is a little gem from "Winning Defense." South ducks the first heart and wins the second in dummy. Then he plays a low club and East should rise with necessary. To start, West must hold back his ace. A second club lead will knock out East's king and East will return his last heart. South will take his ace and lead his queen of diamonds for a finesse. East will be in with the king and have no better play than a diamond return.

You, South, hold:

What do you do?
A—Bid four hearts. You are trapping your partner, but obviously he is very short in diamonds and all your high cards will be helpful to him.

TODAY'S QUESTION
You hold the same hand. Your partner redoubles West's double of your diamond opening. East passes. What do you do now?
