FARM FOREST FACTS

BY BOB BRADLEY
COUNTY EXTENSION FORESTER
OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY

For many years, forest nurseries have been trying to improve the quality and vigor of seedlings they grow. By combining the very best in planting stock with careful handling and appropriate planting techniques, chances for success in planting are greatly enhanced.

One method that has helped in the production of these much sought-after superior seedlings is the use of soil fumigants. As reported in a chemical company publication, "Down to Earth," such fumigants as Trizone and Telone when applied to nursery soils have produced larger Douglas fir and Scotch pine seedlings at the end of the first and second growing seasons. Also root volumes have been increased with an increase in the amount of fumigant applied.

Promise Shown
Not only has soil fumigation shown promise in the control of root-rot nematodes, soil-borne diseases and weed seeds in forest nurseries, but it has increased the growth and yield of seedlings as well.

Fumigation trials at the L. T. Webster Nursery near Olympia, Wash., which were established for weed control also showed this growth response. The increase was noted on Douglas fir and Scotch pine growing in soil treated with Trizone and for Scotch pine growing in soil treated with Telone.

Trizone was applied to seedbeds with a specially designed fumigation implement which simultaneously injected the chemical and covered the treated soil with a polyethylene tarp. The rate was 140 to 200 pounds per acre. Telone was applied at the rate of 50 gallons per acre through 8 soil chisels mounted on a tractor drawbar and was sealed in by water from an overhead irrigation system.

At the end of the first and second growing seasons, ten seedlings from each plot were randomly selected and carefully lifted from the seedbeds and tested by a root rotation technique.

Roots Grow
In the plots treated with Trizone, Scotch pine showed a greater increase in root growth than did Douglas fir. Greatest response for both species was during the first growing season. In the plots treated with Telone, Scotch pine produced twice the root system as a 1-0 seedling and almost twice the root system as a 2-0 seedling when compared to the controls (seedlings in untreated soil).

Thus the use of soil fumigants produced larger and more vigorous seedlings, which would be a definite advantage to any tree planting program.

Returning Airman, Family Now Vacationing In Glendale

By MRS. GERALD B. FOX
Billie Ray Barrong of Glendale, who was discharged from the U.S. Air Force Oct. 1, and his wife and baby daughter, have been visiting with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Barrong of Grants Pass, former Glendale residents. After a vacation period here, which has included some deer hunting, Barrong will apply for work as an IBM operator in the Portland area.

Parents Are Visited
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnston were hosts to their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Houston Wolf, and son, Timmy, overnight last week. The Wolf family, formerly of Winston, were en route to their new home in Dallas, Texas where he will operate a service station and garage.

Darlene Furlong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Furlong, is now attending classes at the Eugene Business College. Her parents drove her up and also visited with Furlong's brother, C. C. Furlong, and family at Springfield.

Carl Burke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Burke, after a 10-day leave at home has returned to his ship, the U.S.S. Midway, at Alameda. The ship will leave on a world cruise next month.

The Rev. and Mrs. Robert Hutchison, pastor and wife at the Glendale Church of Christ, enjoyed a visit Sunday from her sister, Susan Cummings, and her fiancé, David Hunt, both of Salem. Hunt was speaker at the church on Sunday.

Injury Still Plagues

Jewel Hurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hurst, is still under treatment for an injury to her knee which occurred when she tripped and fell while attempting to ring the fire bell the night of the Dave Williamson fire.

Members of the Glendale Assembly of God Church have continued on their project of improvements. Most recently completed was a new section of sidewalk and a concrete curbing flower box. A friendship lantern has been installed near the front door.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Reagan and family and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Harding and son, all of Medford, drove to Glendale on a recent weekend. The women of the two families visited with their mother, Mrs. Earl Hurst, while Reagan and Harding accompanied Mr. Hurst and their son, Earl Hurst, and his wife to Eastern Oregon for hunting.
