Texas Rioters Spit On Stevenson

FLYING TIGER STEWARDESS Marcie Massie, like a lovely human giant, practices turning back the clock at the stroke of midnight of San Francisco's world famous Ferry Building by one hour in preparation for the change from daylight saving time to standard time, which goes into effect at midnight Saturday. Army Secretary Hails Success Of 'Big Lift'

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)—U.S. Army Secretary Cyrus R. Vance, hailing the success of exercise Big Lift, said today America plans to stage similar giant aerial troop movements to the Pacific and probably also to the Middle East next year.

Shortly after arriving here to inspect troop units in the Big Lift exercise, Vance told newsmen the United States has no intention of reducing its combat strength in Europe.

He said the Army will keep its present force of five divisions and four tank regiments here indefinitely.

Vance was asked whether the Defense Department and the Army conducted Big Lift as a forerunner to possible troop withdrawals.

"No," he said. "It was a test of our ability to reinforce (European garrisons) rapidly."

"We have no intention of withdrawing any of our six division equivalent already here."

In Operation Big Lift, completed almost nine hours ahead of schedule Thursday, the 15,000 men of the U.S. 2nd Armored Division were flown from Texas to Western Europe in 63 hours and 5 minutes.

Vance was asked about Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatric's statement Saturday to the annual conference of United Press International publishers and editors in Chicago that Big Lift suggests the United States "should be able to make useful reductions in its heavy overseas military expenditures without diminishing its effective military strength or its capacity to apply that strength swiftly in support of its world wide policy commitments."

Vance said he would not try to interpret what Gilpatric said. "I have stated what the purpose of Big Lift is," he said.

He was asked what the State Department meant when it said this week that America plans no troop reductions in Germany but that "it is obvious in view of new skills in the deployment and use of new weapons we must consult and study with our Allies the possibilities for their use."

"Frankly, I don't know what that means," Vance said. A transatlantic troop flight will be made next year but the exact time has not been set, the Army secretary said.

Lack Of Paint Grounds Local Airline Service

West Coast Airlines has discontinued service to Roseburg until the city makes some changes in the identifications of touchdown patterns.

The last plane landed Thursday night. No more will land until new markings are made on the runways for touchdowns of commercial planes.

WCA announced Thursday it was "involuntarily" interrupting its service "pending correction of airport landing conditions." It noted that at the present time the airport does not meet minimum standards required for commercial aircraft. It said when the air field modifications are made, WCA will resume service. The minimum landing standards were made by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Specifically, West Coast reported it would begin daytime operation again when new "threshold markings" (for point of touchdown) were painted on the runway. Nighttime landings will be allowed only when special night lights are put in.

WCA explains the reason is that obstructions (hills to the north and a pole and building to the south) make it dangerous to land in the present pattern.

City Manager Craig McMicken reported today the city will paint the new threshold markings "as soon as weather permits." At the south end, the markings will be made 1,000 feet from the south end and 1,012 feet from the north end. He said the city is presently studying the problem and cost of putting in new threshold lights.

He also reported a survey will be taken to determine what obstructions must be removed. The building obstructions are on the Con Creek mill property and the city has now received title to it.

Bomb Scare Delays Tito

NEW YORK (UPI) — A bomb scare held up the departure of visiting Yugoslav President Tito for 40 minutes today while scores of police searched the liner Rotterdam.

The Holland-America Lines vessel sailed with Tito and his wife, Jovanka, aboard at 12:40 p.m. EDT after city chief of detectives declared the ship "safe, as far as we are concerned."

The all-out search began when the Coast Guard received an anonymous telephone call saying a bomb had been placed aboard the Rotterdam set to explode at 4 p.m. EDT. The ship had been given a routine check early this morning by security officers.

SIGNS EXTENSION

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy signed into law Thursday legislation which would extend the federal billboard control program until July 1, 1965. The law provides a financial "bonus" to states controlling outdoor advertising on interstate highways.

AN UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN, her tongue sticking out, strikes U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Adlai Stevenson (partly hidden behind sign) with a picket sign. Stevenson was heckled and booed during a speech in Dallas, Tex., Thursday celebrating U.N. Week. As Stevenson was leaving the auditorium this woman struck him and two men spat in his face. U.S. Plans Draft Tests At Age 18

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department is considering a plan under which all youths would be given physical and mental tests for the draft at the age of 18, it was learned today.

At present, the physical and mental tests are given at the time of induction, which averages 23 years.

Defense officials said the purpose of the change would be to increase voluntary enlistments in the armed services.

They said they believed that more youths would enlist if they knew they were physically and mentally qualified and probably would be drafted five years later anyway.

More than half of the potential draftees now are rejected by physical and mental tests, but it is believed the rate of rejections would be far smaller if they were given to all youths.

Enlistments already provide by far the greater proportion of the recruits for the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines. Only the Army is using draftees. In 1962 there were 324,000 enlistments against 81,000 draft inductions.

Conceivably, officials said, enlistments could rise with further encouragement to a point where inductions would be rare or unnecessary.

Moose Conclave Is Set

Representatives of Women of the Moose chapters from all over Oregon will meet in Roseburg Sunday at the Moose Lodge for their annual conclave.

The meeting, to last most of the day, will be conducted by Deputy Grand Regent Winifred Rogers of Springfield.

Registration will start Sunday at 9 a.m.

serve one year in the Douglas County jail, without probation. The jury was unanimous in its verdict, returned after only 38 minutes of deliberation.

The state brought out in testimony that Mrs. Moore, mother of seven children, was receiving in excess of $240 monthly in welfare funds during the period in question covering about a year, while at the same time her husband was receiving about $280 in industrial accident payments. Her two sons, of high school age and for whom she was receiving a special allotment, allegedly were working at Roseburg Lumber Co., making in excess of $300 monthly each.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Philip Washburn produced witnesses during the day long trial to bear out that more than $1,100 was coming into the family, including the welfare payments during this period.

The defense contended, however, that Mrs. Moore was receiving her welfare money legally. Attorney James McGinty attempted to prove that Mrs. Moore had been deserted by her husband, and while it was admitted he was receiving industrial accident payments, he contended Mrs. Moore was not being in any way benefited from his money.

It was also claimed that one of the sons had been laid up with a hip injury preventing his ability to work, and that Mrs. Moore and her other children were not receiving any benefit from the sons' earnings.

The state's case was based on circumstantial evidence, with the assumption that Mrs. Moore was receiving money for support from some of the sources mentioned, in addition to her welfare support payments.

The state produced evidence that Mrs. Moore had signed statements on her financial situation denying support from any other source.

Mrs. Moore took the stand in her own defense and denied the charges alleged.

Daylight Time Comes To End Sunday Morn

By United Press International Daylight saving time, not long ago a touchy topic in Oregon, comes to a peaceful end for the year Sunday.

This was the first year in three years that Oregon had uniform time throughout the late spring, summer and early fall.

A 1961 legislative act permitted five counties to adopt fast time. They did. So did some others, although they weren't supposed to.

So voters last year approved daylight time for the entire state. They had it ending in the last week of September. The 1963 legislature took care of the rest—extending it until the last week of October—to conform with other states that moved up the clock.

Sometime Saturday night residents are supposed to move the clock back an hour.

Roseburg Police Probe Two Forgery Charges

Roseburg City Police are investigating two alleged forged checks passed in Roseburg within the past couple of days. One was for $20 at the Food Mart and another for $21.17 at the Holiday Motel.

The checks bore the signature of Lee Hensley, but a teletype check reveals Hensley is in custody in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Woman Hits U.N. Envoy With Sign

DALLAS (UPI) — Adlai Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, gave an optimistic view of the U.N.'s record of preserving peace Thursday night, then had to fight his way through a militant mob that cursed, booed, beat and spat on him.

Outnumbered police tried to escort him to a waiting limousine. But a woman rushed up and rapped Stevenson on the head with an anti-U.N. placard. Two young men spat in his face.

Police arrested a 22-year-old North Texas State University student. They said he would be charged with inciting to riot and aggravated assault on Stevenson.

About 70 demonstrators shoved and jostled Stevenson, who spoke to commemorate the U.N. Day in Texas.

"It was a concerted action by members of (former Maj. Gen.) Edwin Walker's following and the John Birchers," Jack Goren, president of the sponsoring Dallas U.N. Association, said.

"All they've done is disgrace Dallas and the good manners of Texans and Americans."

Stevenson said he did not understand why persons of different points of view showed such "bad manners."

Frank B. McGehee, leader of a conservative movement known as the National Indignation Convention, rose from the second row of Dallas Memorial Auditorium as Stevenson prepared to start speaking.

"Mr. Ambassador," McGehee said, "I have a question."

"I will be glad to give you equal time when I am through," Stevenson said.

Again McGehee rose and started to address Stevenson.

"Throw him out," cried persons throughout the crowd of 5,000.

"I don't have to come from Illinois to teach Texans manners, do I?" Stevenson asked.

Escorted From Hall

Police escorted McGehee out of the hall.

Members of conservative organizations sat in scattered parts of the auditorium, many waved American flags and some Confederate banners. Stevenson had to stop speaking several times because of hissing, booing and cat-calls.

Stevenson said differences between Communist China and Russia are deep and serious and because of them "the cold war will never be the same again. We are moving into a new era."

He said the atmosphere in the U.N. was the best since 1946 because all nations were talking the language of diplomacy. He termed the world organization a solid investment, costing about $100 million a year.

Closure Deadline Lifted On River

PORTLAND (UPI)—The State Game Commission said today fishermen on the North Umpqua River can return to the regular angling deadlines below Winchester Dam at the old Highway 99 bridge, starting Saturday.

Game Director Phil Schneider said the emergency closure downstream to Davis Rapids, in effect since Sept. 5, was no longer necessary. Angling will now be allowed in that section of the river up to old Highway 99 bridge during the open season.

Germany's Concern Over Lift Project Exasperates Rusk

BONN, Germany (UPI)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk arrived today for a series of talks with West German officials expected to center on their concern that U.S. troop strength here will be cut because of the success of a division-size airlift.

Rusk appeared exasperated when asked about the possibility that troop withdrawals would follow Operation Big Lift, which Thursday completed the movement of more than 15,000 troops from Texas to bases in Germany.

"With Big Lift, there is more military power in Germany today than Germany has ever had in history," he said. "Let it go at that until Sunday."

Aides said Rusk would devote about a third of a speech in Frankfurt Sunday to the question of the U.S. troop commitment in Europe and the matching defense commitment by other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

Today, Rusk unexpectedly added Defense Minister Kai-Uwe von Hassel to the list of German government leaders he will see.

West German officials have expressed concern that the United States plans to rely more on such large-scale airlifts for its defense plans in Europe and less on troops permanently stationed here. They fear some of the six U.S. divisions in Germany will be sent back to the United States.

To Give Explanation

Rusk said before leaving Washington Thursday that he will explain to new Chancellor Ludwig Erhard and other officials that "we are fully meeting our NATO commitments and intend to do so" in the future.

Asked whether he would give specific reassurances that no early cutback of U.S. forces was planned, Rusk said "I don't think any reassurance is necessary. Look at what we've got there."

Soviet Consumers To Get First Canadian Wheat

MOSCOW (UPI) — The first load of the 21 days it normally takes to unload such a shipment of Canadian wheat to reach the Soviet Union was on its way to consumers today. There were reports that cattle were being slaughtered in farm areas short of fodder.

The government newspaper Izvestia reported the arrival of the first 21,000 tons of Canadian wheat Thursday and said it had been unloaded in 71 hours in stead of the 21 days it normally takes to unload such a shipment.

The wheat is part of the 6.8 million tons bought from Canada for $500 million because of large-scale crop failures in the Soviet Union. Talks are being held for sales of $250 million more from the United States, and Australia already has sold $100 million worth to Russia.

More Wheat Expected

Another 50,000 tons of Canadian wheat was expected in the Black Sea port of Odessa in the next few days.

The effects of the grain shortage were being felt on many farms, according to reports in the Soviet press.

The newspaper Soviet Russia said Thursday that in the Kursk area, about 400 miles south of Moscow, "trucks are lined up at the entrances to the slaughter centers."

"These are from collective farms trying to get rid of cattle," it added. "We have no fodder for the cattle," they complain.

The newspaper quoted a collective farmer as having said "we do not have a single potato to feed the pigs."

It said the premature slaughter of the livestock "causes serious apprehension" apparently referring to the possibility of meat shortages later in the year.
