IMPOSTER—On Sept. 9 a new teacher, bespectacled and nervous, walked into a sophomore English class at Chicago's Englewood High School and rapped for attention. He was known to school officials, fellow teachers and students as Alfred George Jack, 28, of East Orange, N. J. He was unmasked this week by board of examiners of Board of Education and Cook County State's Attorney's office as David Wilson Gauss, 30, from Baltimore, Md., and admitted he was an ex-convict who never went beyond the sixth grade. Gauss is shown during questioning. Even now, school's principal refers to Gauss as a "most excellent English teacher, much above the average."

RIOTERS BOO STEVENSON — A demonstrator, identified as Robert Edward Hatfield, 22, a North Texas State University student, grimaces as police handcuff him after he reportedly spat upon U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Adlai Stevenson in Dallas, Tex. Thursday night. The incident occurred as Stevenson was leaving auditorium after making speech in honor of United Nations Day. Stevenson was also hit on the head with a sign carried by a woman rioter. One Texas official blamed followers of former Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker and members of the John Birch Society for the demonstration.

TAMES WILD GEESE — These once-wild Canadian honkers show no fear as they eat corn from the hands of Janis Willson, 11, on the Willson ranch on the Applegate River near Murphy, Ore. The wild geese just came to the ranch about three weeks ago and remained, possibly to enjoy the free handout from the young lady.

on board the Holland-America Lines "University of the Seven Seas." Some 350 students on the 110-day voyage, are bound for 22 ports of call on the around-the-world cruise designed to combine education with pleasure.
