

Star Has No Pangs For Frank Anymore

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If Juliet Prowse had to do it over again, would she still refuse to marry Frank Sinatra?
 "Yes," she said.
 The long stemmed beauty canceled her engagement to the thin singer almost two years ago and has had no regrets.
 "At first I was broken up about it because I was in love with Frank," Miss Prowse said on her return to Hollywood after almost a year's absence.
 "But it was only a temporary feeling. I found out that absence does not make the heart grow fonder."
 Juliet says Sinatra still telephones her from time to time and that they did have a date last May, but as far as she's concerned the romance is as cold as Frank's Nevada gambling interests.
 "Poor Frank. If I'd married him I'd be going through all this trouble with him now," she said.
 "I think marriage would be a good thing for Frank, but not with me. He's a lonely man, and a happy marriage would snap him out of it."
 Juliet still refuses to prescribe matrimony for herself.

 "I'm not sorry I didn't marry Frank — or anyone else for that matter. He was 21 years older than I am. And I think that's too much for a girl in her 20s," she continued. "I'm very happy in my work."
 Juliet's work has taken her throughout the country for personal appearances in nightclubs and summer stock. Next month she makes her debut before Los Angeles audiences at the Coconut Grove.
Ten Years More
 "I'd have had to give up my career if Frank and I had gone through with our marriage," she said. "I want to continue dancing for at least 10 years and at the same time do some straight drama and comedy work too."
 "If a husband could put up with that, all right. But it would take a very understanding man to marry a career girl."
 When she's not on the road Juliet attends ballet class every day, and to keep her legs in shape she visits a health club too.
 Her schedule keeps her so busy she has little time — or inclination, for that matter — for dating. When she's on the road Juliet gets as much rest as possible after her performances. At home she regains her energy for hitting the road.
 When Sinatra announced his engagement to the dancer it was with the understanding that she would give up her career.
 Evidently Frank misunderstood.
 When Juliet announced she would be both Mrs. Sinatra and performer she pulled the switch to single blessedness.
 Since canceling their nuptials both parties have escaped entangling alliances with the opposite sex. And from all appearances, it looks as if the status will remain quo in the foreseeable future.

Bonn Says 'Big Lift' May Be Embarrassing

By PHIL NEWSOM

 Notes from the foreign news cables:
Too Good:
 Mechanically, Operation "Big Lift", the job of flying a complete U.S. division to Germany in little more than 60 hours, was a total success. But in Bonn they are saying it may prove a long-term political embarrassment. Despite U.S. assurances, jittery West Germans are not convinced that the massive airlift was not a forerunner to reduction of U.S. forces in Europe. Pressures now may begin building on new Chancellor Ludwig Erhard to start being nicer to President Charles de Gaulle.

Closer and Closer:
 Expect Britain to move even closer to the United States under the new leadership of Sir Alexander Douglas-Home. The new prime minister, even more than Harold Macmillan, has been a staunch supporter of an Atlantic policy in firm alignment with the United States. Douglas-Home has been the driving force behind Britain's decision to join the United States in talks with other allies on the possible creation of a multi-nation nuclear naval force. He held out against strong opposition in the cabinet when he was the foreign minister in Macmillan's set up.

Closer with France, Too:
 Despite the decision to retain close ties to the United States, a marked improvement in relations between France and Britain may also be in the offing. The meeting at the Hague last Thursday between French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and Britain's new foreign secretary, R. A. Butler, may mark a fresh start after nine months of deep freeze that followed De Gaulle's blackball of Britain for Common Market membership.

Austerity:
 The French government is bracing for a troublesome round of strikes this fall, particularly in nationalized industries such as the rails, and gas and electricity. But De Gaulle, Premier Georges Pompidou and Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing reportedly feel time and public opinion will be on the government's side in defending its save-the-franc austerity program, including a temporary wage freeze.

Voter Apathy:
 A thunderous silence so far has been the voter reaction to Japan's general election campaign. Number of candidates for the Japanese parliament is the smallest since the war. The issues—high prices, the U.S. alliance, reconciliation with South Korea—have not stirred voter imagination. The in-power Conservatives seek an absolute majority, the opposition Socialists enough strength to block constitutional revision. Election day is Nov. 21 but so far the voters would just as soon go fishing.
