

Wheat Sale Might Increase Shortage Of Railroad Cars

PORTLAND (UPI) —If the government carries through with its plan to sell wheat to Russia, a railroad freight car shortage is likely to get worse, Robert S. Macfarlane, president of Northern Pacific Railway said this week.

Macfarlane, in Portland on an inspection trip, said the Canadian wheat deal with Russia and talk about a similar American deal has caused the market price for wheat to climb above support prices.

He said the result has been that farmers decided to sell their wheat which was thrown on the market at a time when the peak movement of sorghum and soybeans was under way.

He said the present embargo on shipments of grain by rail to Pacific Northwest ports is considered unfair by the railroads and they are trying to get it lifted. He said, however, there were still between 3,000 and 4,000 carloads of grain on sidings in the Northwest waiting for unloading.
