

FRB Ups Margin Requirement Retarded Children, Too, Are Sensitive To Opinions Of Others

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As of Wednesday stock market traders will have to put up at least 70 per cent in cash for the purchase of securities.

In an announcement released Tuesday the Federal Reserve Board (FRB) increased the margin requirement from the 50 per cent to which it was lowered in July, 1962, when the market was recovering from a serious slump.

Because the announcement came on a New York market holiday, and was issued after the Midwest Stock Exchange at Chicago was closed, the Pacific Coast Exchange was the only one still active when the announcement was made public.

MONEY TIME

There, trading activity almost doubled the moderately active pace it had shown earlier in the day. An official said "all hell broke loose as soon as the news came out."

Trading in Wall Street Thursday, coming after an overnight opportunity to digest the FRB ruling, probably revealed more significant clues to the impact of the margin increase on investors.

The board's action, described as precautionary, came at a time when the amount of credit used to buy stock had risen by 43 per cent from where it stood a year ago July, to the current figure of $6.971 billion.

It acted under authority of the 1934 Securities and Exchange Act, which empowers the board to raise margin requirements to prevent the excessive use of credit.

It noted that since July 9, 1962, when the cut from 70 to 50 per cent was made, nearly $1.8 billions of the $2.1 billion additional credit was in customer net debits of brokerage firms.

Wall Street reaction was mixed on possible effects of the cut.

Possibility of a rise in the margin requirement had been considered on Wall Street for some time, although the holiday timing caught some persons by surprise.

Some sources expressed the belief that the move may slow the market momentarily but others recalled that "the street" had been through the whole thing before.

Wall Street quarters also were divided as to effect of the move in the small investor. Although a few brokers have reported rising numbers of accounts since the first of the year, most traders say that "the public" has not returned to the market in anything like the numbers represented before the big shakeout in the last days of May, 1962.

UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Retarded children are more like other children than unlike them. Like normal children, retarded children are sensitive to the opinion of others. And, there is much the mentally retarded children can learn, if parents and teachers help him with what most normal children absorb or figure out by themselves.

These are among the several points made in a publication which arrives only a few days after President Kennedy signed legislation authorizing a $329 million program to deal with mental retardation through the construction of community health centers and through research and treatment.

The President's sister, Rosemary, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, is in an institution for the mentally retarded.

"People used to be ashamed of a mentally retarded child," the president's mother told one reporter recently. "That's not true today. People don't think a child should be shunted away, and not mentioned." Mrs. Kennedy told of the family foundation that has given more than $16.5 million since 1946 to hospitals, institutions, day care centers and research projects in the field of mental health.

The author of the publication, "The Retarded Child Gets Ready for School," is concerned particularly with education because she says it determines to a great extent how successful the child will be in leading a normal life as possible.

The booklet is the work of Mrs. Margaret Hill, education chairman of the Wyoming branch of the National Association for Retarded Children and writer on the subjects of mental health, child-rearing and education. The publisher is the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit education organization founded in 1935.

Mrs. Hill explains there are varying degrees of retardation and that sometimes it is necessary to institutionalize a child who is so severely retarded that his physical care makes the family "ense, irritable and over-fatigued." The author shows through the contrasts in the story of twin boys, one of whom is retarded, one not, how a family can prepare a retarded youngster for school.

She reminds that a handicapped child should not be identified by his exceptionalities as "that deaf boy," "that retarded child," "the girl with the limp," "degree to which each of these goals can be fulfilled varies according to the nature and severity of the child's mental deficit."

"Retarded children are more like other children than unlike them," she said. "and general goals for educating the retarded should follow, in so far as practical, the same goals for education of normal children... (in) self-sufficiency, economic usefulness, satisfying human relationships, civic responsibility."

"Obviously," she added, "the
