

1,250 Attend Conference Of Jehovah's Witnesses

One hundred and forty-seven delegates from the Roseburg-Winston area were in attendance at the semi-annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses this past weekend at Winston.

Sunday afternoon Lester M. Dugan, district minister for the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, delivered the main discourse on "The Bible Triumphs in a Scientific World." There was a total attendance of 1,250 from 16 congregations in Southern Oregon.

One of the highlights of the three-day meet was the baptism-ordination service held Saturday afternoon. During the baptismal discourse, Dugan explained that Jehovah's Witnesses follow the pattern established by Christ in that ordination comes with baptism and not after completion of a course in

Convicts' Arms Give Answer To Old Question On Wound Healing

NEW YORK (UPI) — The arms of seven convicts provided an impressive if tentative answer to the old question of whether a wound heals faster when it is banded than when it is left exposed to the air.

The San Quentin Prison inmates volunteered the experimental use of their arms by Cameron D. Hinman and Howard Maibach of the University of California, School of Medicine, San Francisco.

Hinman and Maibach took slices of skin from each arm—tiny slices about one-fifth of an inch long, but deep enough to include the top-most skin layer and the layer beneath. It was painlessly done, of course, under local anesthesia.

Half of each man's wounds were covered over with polyethylene film which is the ultimate of air-excluding bandage since it admits no air whatever. The other wound was left exposed.

On the 3rd, 5th, 7th and 9th days after this slicing the scientists punched very tiny samples from wounds, sliced the samples and then studied the slices under high magnification.

The wounds which got no air began acquiring a covering of new, healthy skin so much more rapidly than the open wounds there was no need to measure to prove it, the scientists reported.

But measure they did and in all comparisons the banded wound healed two to five times faster than the exposed one. By the 7th day all wounds were covered over with new skin, however, and by the 9th all were completely healed.

The scientists were reserved in describing their experimental results in the technical journal, "Nature." In the past, they said, excluding all air from wounds invited infection because tight dressings created

Infection Danger Lessened

But now skin infections can be prevented with antibiotics, they continued, and there was not a single infection in their subjects thanks to the generous use of an antibiotic solution.

"We do not know whether these observations will fall in the realm of biological curiosity or if they will have practical importance in the treatment of cutaneous (surface) wounds and burns in man."

The ultimate answer will be given by surgeons and physicians emboldened by this experiment and a previous one of George D. Winter, English, experimental scientist, to keep the air out of the wounds and burns of large numbers of patients.

Winter's experiments emboldened Hinman and Maibach to undertake theirs in human beings.

ings. Winter experimented with pigs. He found pig wounds heal faster when their surfaces are moist than when they are dried out by exposure to air. Like the Californians, he prevented infection with antibiotics and excluded air from some wounds with plastic coverings.
