She reportedly devoted over 23 years of her life to aiding both the men involved and in many instances, their widows and children.

Several of the men who survived the imprisonment reportedly live in the Roseburg area. Mrs. Ward was reported to have "adopted" some 900 men, women and children who were affected by the capture of the islands and to have made many trips to the nation's capitol on their behalf.

She was born March 8, 1901, in Memphis, Tenn., and was married to Leonard Ward in Yuma, Ariz., in 1928. The couple had resided in Southern Oregon since 1950, moving there from Southern California.

Rohde, his wife, Helen Louise, and their two children, Elizabeth Ann, 9, and Kim Marie Rohde, 7, who suffered injuries, were on their way to Riddle to visit Mrs. Rohde's father, Ed Dowdy, when the accident occurred about three miles north of Riddle.

Rohde was born March 29, 1935, at Rickreall, and had been a resident of Roseburg about a year, coming here from Tillamook. He was employed by Buckley Bell, contractor, at Roseburg. This was done in advance of Johnson's meetings later today with Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan and West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard.

Johnson and De Gaulle arranged Monday night to confer in Washington next year, possibly in February.

At a White House meeting this morning, the President and Douglas-Home also agreed to meet "early in the new year." The British leader said, however, no time or place for the get-together has been set.

Sir Alec told newsmen after the meeting that he and the President talked of "some outstanding problems but only briefly." They decided to postpone a more full discussion until their meeting next year, he said.

The British leader told newsmen: "I have taken this opportunity at the President's request to come here for a talk. We did not, of course, on this occasion do any business but we agreed to keep close contact as there had been in the past. When the time comes, President Johnson will propose a meeting early in the next year."

Johnson arranged to see visiting foreign leaders who had come here from throughout the world to attend the funeral of slain President John F. Kennedy.

His first caller today was 71-year-old Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia. The African ruler told newsmen he was "very happy" with what he termed his "small talk" with the President.

"We wish for the American government and people and President Johnson that God will find it possible to give peace, happiness and prosperity to mankind," Selassie said.

Other callers on the President's list were Philippine President Diosdado Macapagal and Turkish Prime Minister Ismet Inonu.

City Council Meet Set For Tuesday

The Roseburg City Council is scheduled to act on a City Planning Commission recommendation to proceed with plans for off-street parking facilities in the central business district area at its regular meeting Tuesday night.

The meeting, originally scheduled for Monday evening, was postponed one day in deference to President John's call for a national day of mourning in respect to the late President John F. Kennedy.

The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Three public hearings are set for Tuesday night. They are (1) proposed acceptance of work on the W. Pilger Street sanitary sewer extension; (2) on proposed assessments for the NW Lynwood Drive sanitary sewer extension; and (3) the proposed annexation of property to the city.

The Airport Commission is scheduled to report on progress of a survey being made by aviation consultant, R. T. Lamson, on improvements needed to be made by the city to insure future airline travel here.

Mourning For Kennedy Slows Mothers' March

The national day of mourning observed for the late President John F. Kennedy put a damper Monday on the scheduled Mothers' March for Muscular Dystrophy in Roseburg.

Although some workers made their rounds in an appeal for MD funds, many others will be contacting their neighbors to drive and Wednesday, drive leaders reported.

Sherman, Wheeler, Umatilla and Morrow counties, the latter the site of the 100,000-acre project. Haight represents Baker and Grant counties.

"I have had to finally come to the realization that if I am to represent the people of Eastern Oregon, I must take this position," Smith said.

He emphasized that he does not believe termination of the Boeing agreement would be the end of industrial development at Boardman, nor would it necessarily mean the end of Boeing's interest in the area.

"I have nothing against Boeing as long as they sign a lease at least as favorable to the state as to themselves," he said.

He predicted the state would not have any trouble finding tenants for an industrial site as

In Salem, Musa said he had "a profound faith in this proposition" and felt it would be of lasting benefit to the area. The Boardman issue comes before the special session of the legislature which reconvenes next Monday.

New President Was Ardent Admirer, Got Boost From Franklin Roosevelt

WASHINGTON (UPI)—If President Johnson had to choose one day on which his entire future hinged, he probably would select April 10, 1937. On that day he won a special election for a seat in Congress.

That alone would not have made the day significant, but by chance President Franklin D. Roosevelt was on a fishing trip off Corpus Christi, Tex. Johnson had run on a straight New Deal platform, backing everything Roosevelt wanted to do, including the backing of the Supreme Court.

Roosevelt got interested in the new congressman, and invited

Cola Beverages

Q. Should older persons (we are called "senior citizens") donate blood?
A. Most blood-collecting agencies will accept blood from donors who are between 18 and 59 years of age. The upper age limit is imposed in order to protect persons whose health might be impaired by the rapid loss of an amount of blood that represents 7 to 10% of their total blood volume. Therefore, people who are 60 or older are generally not accepted as donors.

Q. Do cola drinks contain caffeine?
A. All cola drinks contain caffeine. The Food and Drug Administration permits use of caffeine in these beverages up to 1.2 grains per 12-oz. bottle. By way of comparison, the average 5-oz. cup of coffee contains about 1.5 grains caffeine.

We package prescriptions in safe, efficient containers that protect the medicine against possible harmful effects of light, air or moisture.

him to travel to Washington on the presidential train. They shared Manhattan cocktails on the trip, Roosevelt talked and Johnson listened. Back in Washington, Johnson began to receive invitations to breakfast at the White House and to get good committee assignments in the House of Representatives.

Had Narrow Squeaks Thereafter Johnson had some narrow political squeaks, which would make Hollywood cliffhangers seem improbable, but he definitely was on his way up the Washington ladder. Year by year his influence increased until his career reached its culmination last week at the Dallas airport where he was sworn in as President of the United States.

Roosevelt kept urging Johnson on to bigger and better things, specifically persuading him to run for the U.S. Senate seat vacated by the death of Sen. Norris Sheppard Politics in Texas is gaudy and the infighting is fierce. Johnson had 27 opponents for the Senate seat. The most formidable was Gov. Lee O'Daniel whose followers constantly exhorted him to "pass the biscuits, Pappy." Pappy's technique for discussing the issues was to hire a hillbilly band and employ a girl singer called "Texas Rose. Johnson retaliated by employing a diva weighing 285 pounds and billing her as "the Kate Smith of the South."

As insurance, he also retained the services of some dancing girls and a black-face comedian. It was in vain. Pappy defeated Johnson by 1,311 votes.

Saw Active Duty Two days after Pearl Harbor, Johnson obtained leave from his seat in the House and, as a reserve officer, went on active duty with the Navy as a lieutenant commander and saw service in the Southwest Pacific. Roosevelt ordered him to return to his duties as a congressman, and in 1948 Johnson made his second run for the Senate. His opponent was Gov. Coke Stevenson, who had never lost an election. Johnson changed tactics, substituting a helicopter for the diva and the dancing girls. He roared back and forth across Texas in the helicopter and cotton field workers frequently were astonished to hear a voice from the skies below: "Hello down there. This is your candidate, Lyndon Johnson."

In a run-off election between Johnson and Stevenson almost one million votes were cast. It was so incredibly close that the final count gave Johnson the victory by 87 votes, and when he took his Senate seat he had to learn to keep smiling while people referred to him as "Landslide Lyndon."

He spent three years in the Senate making friends and largely keeping his mouth shut. In 1951 he was chosen whip of the Senate Democrats and from there went on to become Democratic leader. It is an office that requires tact, patience and hard work. Johnson had to become a bridge between the Southern conservatives and the Northern liberals in the party. Sometimes he had to enforce party discipline with stern measures. Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin complained publicly that Johnson was running a one-man show that reduced his fellow Democrats to the role of yes men.

Johnson undoubtedly would have taken the Democratic presidential nomination in 1956 if it had been offered to him which it wasn't. In 1960 he made a hard run for it. But he arrived at the Los Angeles Democratic Convention to find that John F. Kennedy's travel and hard work at the political grass roots had made the Johnson cause all but hopeless.

Exchanged Harsh Words Johnson fought on and before the balloting started he and Kennedy exchanged some harsh words. Gradually, Johnson became convinced he couldn't get the nomination. The fact that he was a Southerner was against him, organized labor was skeptical about him, he seemed to be closely tied to the conservative oil interests in the Southwest.

If those things made it impossible for him to get the nomination, they were precisely the reasons Kennedy wanted him for the vice presidential nomination. The approach was made to Johnson, the differences were smoothed over, the harsh words were forgotten and forgiven. Kennedy shrewdly appealed to Johnson on the grounds of party unity and a potential Democratic victory. To a man like Johnson, for whom almost every waking moment is filled with political considerations, the appeal was impossible to resist.

Next: The tough early years and what the future holds.

Robert M. Collom, 38, a Roseburg native but listed by police as a transient, faces charges of vagrancy and resisting arrest, in Roseburg Municipal Court, and assault and battery, as charged in a District Court complaint.

A Roseburg policeman, Officer Stephen Ryder, suffered a cut on the upper lip, a tooth knocked out and other front teeth loosened, when he allegedly stopped a blow from the fist of Collom in an arrest attempt.

The officer's report stated Collom was accosted when seen leaving the rear entrance of the Oak Hill Apartments Friday about 1:45 p.m. The man was seen walking south on SE Main St., but reversed his direction on observing the officer.

Officer Ryder stated that Collom became belligerent and refused to give him routine information as to identification and employment, then struck him in the mouth and ran.

Two county weighmaster employes, Floyd Haas of Idleyld Rd., and Delbert Anderson of 1582 SE Eddy St., happened by and gave assistance to Ryder. Collom allegedly fought with the three men until the officer got the handcuffs on him. He is booked at the city jail.

In other action, police Saturday night took into custody Verl Dean Tandy, 33, Waldport, and his estranged wife Christine Ann Tandy, 25, of 1325 S. Cobb St., Roseburg, booked for disorderly conduct. Mrs. Tandy was released on posting bail.

Northeast Oregon Solons Oppose Boardman Lease

PORTLAND (UPI)—Two state representatives from northeastern Oregon declared today they will oppose the Boardman Industrial Park legislation now awaiting action at Salem.

Their announcement came after another Democrat, House Speaker Ben Musa of the Dalles, came out in favor of the legislation to clear title to the land so Boeing would honor a 77-year lease signed July 1.

"To me 77 years is a whole of a long time," Smith said today.

"It is not a good idea to tie up valuable land for 77 years and tie up the tax base on that land, while at the same time giving Boeing a right to sublease that land and saying they must only occupy part of it," Smith represents Gilliam, finest remaining industrial site, under a lease which was held to be unconstitutional in several clauses by the attorney general last Friday.

Their announcement came after another Democrat, House Speaker Ben Musa of the Dalles, came out in favor of the legislation to clear title to the land so Boeing would honor a 77-year lease signed July 1.

"To me 77 years is a whole of a long time," Smith said today.

"It is not a good idea to tie up valuable land for 77 years and tie up the tax base on that land, while at the same time giving Boeing a right to sublease that land and saying they must only occupy part of it," Smith represents Gilliam, valuable as Boardman. He also contended that the lease with Boeing does not require that firm to do anything.

"The plans of Boeing are nebulous beyond belief," the statement said.

It also brought up the threat of pollution of the Columbia River and the air over the area. The statement said a Boeing witness before the Ways and Means Committee last week had admitted that fluorides and other chemicals would be dumped into the Columbia River.

"Even worse, Oregon would have no remedy to combat pollution," the two lawmakers continued. "Any interference with the company's intended or desired industrial use...of the waterfront property...shall constitute a breach of the state's covenant."

Only a few hours before their stand was announced, Gov. Mark Hatfield said he did not expect the state would request Boeing to negotiate a revision of the lease. He said it was the same basic lease that was published in 1961.

However, Smith contended that sections covering the use of waterfront property and allowing Boeing to sublease the land for agricultural purposes are new.

In Salem, Musa said he had "a profound faith in this proposition" and felt it would be of lasting benefit to the area. The Boardman issue comes
