

Adlai Says China's Lone-Wolf Policy Poses Threat To World

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UPI) — U. S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson said today that Red China's "aggressive, lone wolf" foreign policy is more and more threatening to the world and that any change in relations with the United States must come from Peking.

But, Stevenson told a news conference in which he summed up the General Assembly which closed Tuesday night, "The monolithic Communist world is full of cracks and diversity no longer is the monopoly of one group."

Stevenson underlined President Johnson's appeal in the Assembly Tuesday for an end to the East-West cold war. He said the President emphasized his personal experience with the New Deal in the United States 30 years ago and envisioned an extension of its principles to the world.

However, Stevenson foresaw no change in U.S. economic policy although he called attention to Johnson's emphasis on multilateral aid, such as through the United Nations.

Nor did he see any change in U. S. policy toward Communist China reflected in a statement made by Roger Hillsman last Friday which was regarded in some quarters as a new administration posture on the issue.

Hillsman said in San Francisco that while he saw no likelihood of the overthrow of the Peking regime, the United States was "determined to keep the door open."

"The problem of China rests in Peking, not in Washington," Stevenson said. "The policy of Communist China is made in Peking, not in Washington. If there are to be any changes in its relations with other powers, including the United States, those changes must be made in Peking."

"There are dangers, of course, when any big iceberg begins to crack. The fissures in the Communist world have caused the aggressive, lone wolf foreign policy of Communist China to stand out as both more obvious and more threatening to the rest of the world."

Stevenson said the research project will be the "guinea pigs" in a research project to be conducted by Southern Oregon College humanities staff members soon.

The study will involve English composition and methods of teaching it at the school. The study was announced today by Dr. Arthur Kreisman, chairman of SOC's humanities division.

Dr. Kreisman said the experiment, which will be coordinated by Robert Casebeer, head of the Riddle High English department, had received the approval of the superintendent, Kenneth Stuart, and the Riddle School Board.

Assisting Dr. Kreisman in the experiment will be Dr. Richard

Riddle Students To Serve As Education Guinea Pigs

H. Byrns, professor of English, and Dr. Donald E. Moore, associate professor of education and English at the college.

The research project will be supported financially from the Oregon State System of Higher Education research division of Project English in the U.S. Office of Education's research program in English. Other financial aid may also be obtained through various foundation programs, such as the Ford Foundation's current Oregon Program. No local taxation will be involved.

Kreisman said Riddle was considered ideal for the project because of the large numbers of SOC graduates currently employed there, the assured continuity of personnel at Riddle and the "long history of interest in enlightened educational processes tempered by a thorough foundation in fundamentals."

The 650 enrollment is also considered a workable size.

State Tax Commission Upholds Coos Assessments On Industrial Coastline

SALEM (UPI) — The State Tax Commission has refused to take jurisdiction of a tax dispute involving industrial lands along the Coos Bay shoreline, and has upheld the assessments levied by the Coos County Board of Equalization, it was announced today.

The commission's action voids assessment increases ranging from 50 per cent to 4,000 per cent that had been levied by Coos County Assessor F. R. Flanagan.

The Equalization Board's action reduced the assessment increases levied by Flanagan.

Involved in the dispute were waterfront properties belonging to the Menasha Corporation, Weyerhaeuser Company, Al Pierce Co., Evans Products Company, Coos Bay Dredging Company, Central Dock Company and Coos Bay Timber Company.

The properties were valued at $31,663 before being increased to $104,487 by Flanagan.

Total $55,250

The Board of Equalization's assessments which were ratified by today's tax commission decision, total $55,250.

The dispute was aired before the commission at a hearing here Dec. 3.

Appearing before the commission were Joseph McKeown and John Whitty, representing the taxpayers; Dale W. Conn, Coos County deputy district attorney, representing the equalization board; Robert O'Rand of Georgia-Pacific Corp.; Marlon Larson of Weyerhaeuser; Harry Loggan, director of the valuation division, and Gerald F. Bartz of the law section of the Tax Commission, and Flanagan.

On May 15 the Board of Equalization issued an order changing Flanagan's assessments.

The commission ruled Flanagan did not appeal the assessments within the 30-day period required by law, and therefore turned down Flanagan's request that the State Tax Commission take jurisdiction and fix the new assessments.

The true cash values set by the board and ratified by the tax commission were:

Menasha $7,000, Weyerhaeuser $18,500, Al Pierce $13,250, Evans Products $4,500, Central Dock $7,500, and Coos Bay Timber $4,500.

The values for Coos Bay Dredging were unchanged, and not listed in the commission's ruling.
