Comedian Heads Dobbs House Restaurant Sit-In

ATLANTA (UPI) — Anti-segregation demonstrators, led by Negro comedian Dick Gregory, forced the closure of at least five Dobbs House restaurants Monday during a daylong sit-in campaign.

No one was arrested during the demonstrations by Gregory, of Chicago, and about 35 Negro and white persons.

John Furrow, manager of one of the restaurants, said he had orders from the firm's Memphis headquarters not to press charges against the demonstrators.

The campaign was directed at Toddle House and Dobbs House lunch counters, both of which are owned by the Dobbs firm. The group also forced temporary closure of the Tiki Bar and Polynesian Restaurant, which is operated by the Dobbs firm.

Julian Bond, a spokesman for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) which is directing the campaign, said a bus carrying volunteer demonstrators and Mrs. Gloria Richardson, a Negro leader from Cambridge, Md., was expected to arrive this afternoon to aid in the campaign.

Mrs. Richardson was a leader of the desegregation movement which sent tensions soaring in that Chesapeake Bay fishing village this summer.

The demonstrations Monday began at a Toddle House on Peachtree Street which has been the target of numerous demonstrations. Gregory's wife, Lillian, was arrested earlier at that lunch counter and is in jail awaiting trial on trespass charges.

Gregory and about 35 others walked in and occupied all the seats in the establishment. They were refused service and vowed to "stay until we can eat."

But they were forced out about three hours later when manager Furrow ordered the restaurant closed "for extermination" of insects.
