Friends, Critics Picket Gov. Wallace In Portland

PORTLAND (UPI) — Gov. George Wallace of Alabama says he is thinking about entering the Oregon Democratic presidential primary.

Wallace, who flew into Portland Sunday evening from San Francisco, said a primary campaign would be a method of giving the South a larger voice in national politics.

The governor said he had received a large amount of mail from Oregonians expressing support for his policies.

Wallace was greeted by both critical and friendly demonstrators when he arrived at the Hilton Hotel but no serious incidents were reported. One student was booked on a disorderly conduct charge after a complaint alleged a pro-Wallace demonstrator was pushed off a sidewalk.

A quiet demonstration opposing Wallace's segregationist policies had been planned but a few youths joined marchers and chanted, "Wallace go home." A few persons carried signs saying, "Welcome Gov. Wallace."

Estimates of the number of demonstrators varied from around 175 to 300.

Wallace said purpose of his trip was "to emancipate the people of Oregon from the distorted views of the national press and radio and television."

He attacked the proposed civil rights bill. In an earlier television appearance in San Francisco Sunday he said the "federal government's grab for power,"

Solons Aren't Likely To Seek Law To Regulate Smoking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government action against cigarette smoking appeared likely today to center in two fields — education and research.

There were indications that Congress would be willing to provide more money for such a two-way attack, but there was little likelihood that legislators would try to enact laws to regulate smoking.

Such action, based on a government report released Saturday that cigarette smoking is a menace to health, might include giving the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) more power to control cigarette advertising and labeling. Funds might also be appropriated to increase research into the still unknown elements of tobacco that cause the harmful effects.

The report said that cigarette smoking is a cause of lung cancer and related to such other deadly diseases as chronic bronchitis, emphysema and coronary artery disease. It said cigarette smoking contributes substantially to the nation's death rate.

Surgeon General Luther L. Terry, in making public the study by a 10-member advisory committee of prominent scientists, said the Public Health Service was considering "remedial action" and would recommend specific steps to President Johnson soon.

Terry added that he expected other federal agencies and state and municipal government units would consider whatever action they might take after studying the book-length report.

George Allen, spokesman for the American Tobacco Institute, supported Terry's call for more research into tobacco hazards. He said the tobacco industry was ready to cooperate fully in further studies of the danger.

Rep. Harold Cooley, D-N.C., proposed immediate construction of a $5 million federal research laboratory in his tobacco-growing state to discover ways to make smoking safer.

Sen. Lister Hill, D-Ala., planned to meet with Terry to find out if any new legislation is needed and also to hold public hearings on the subject.

Hill, an expert on health legislation, is chairman of the Senate health subcommittee, its parent Labor and Public Welfare Committee and the appropriations subcommittee for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, asked the Labor and Public Welfare Committee to hold hearings soon on his bill to apply the Pure Food and Drug Act to tobacco. Other senators have suggested that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) require cigarette companies to label packs with a warning of hazardous substances.

While no one expected the government report to end cigarette smoking, it was hoped it would encourage many persons to cut down their cigarette consumption, and discourage non-smokers from picking up the habit.

Local Gun Club Members Attend Wildlife Meeting

The Roseburg Rod and Gun Club, a member of the Oregon Wildlife Federation, was represented at the annual state convention in Corvallis the past weekend by Charles S. Collins and Berl Oar, delegates.

Others attending from Roseburg club included John P. Amacher, state game commissioner; Charles Henne, who served the federation as legislative representative at the last session of the Oregon Legislature and Charles V. Stanton, editor of the News-Review.

Winner of the William Joy Smith award, the Federation's highest trophy, at the 1963 meeting, Stanton presented the award for 1964 to C. C. (Chan) Schenk, Portland.

Schenk was selected from the than 25 years of active participation in the field of conservation and, particularly, in the federation for which he served as state president in 1941-42.

In a business highlight of the convention, the federation voted to support an initiative petition which seeks to ban commercial salmon and steelhead fishing on the Columbia River. The vote came on a motion by the group's fish committee which called for defeat of a resolution asking the federation to retract earlier action supporting the measure.

not segregation, was the real issue in the south.

He said if the civil rights bill pending in Congress was passed the government will "take over business and tell you who you can hire and fire."
