O. A. C. Surprises Whitman

Whitman College, Oct. 29, (Special)—In what was undoubtedly the most distinct surprise of the season, the heavy team from the Oregon Agricultural College completely outplayed the local team this afternoon, defeating them by the decisive score of 10 to 6, which represents very well their relative strength. Whitman showed more speed and better form in the open play, but could not use their advantage on the heavy field. They stood no chance whatever in straight football.

During the first half Whitman fought desperately and it required twenty minutes for the heavy O. A. C. backs to work the ball within scoring distance. Both goals were missed.

In the second half the Whitman team was plainly worn out and could not keep up the pace. It required only four minutes for the visitors to negotiate their second touchdown. Immediately after the ball was in play again, Borleske caught a punt and made a sensational run through a scattered field for a touchdown. He kicked goal, making the score 10 to 6.

Whitman had one more chance to score when Fee caught a forward pass

SPRINGFIELD WAGON BRIDGE IS UNSAFE

The wagon bridge across the river at Springfield is unsafe or nearly so, according to Professor Frink's class in Bridge Design, which inspected the Springfield bridges Wednesday. They found that the roller bearing for taking up expansion was out of order, which causes greater stress in the members of the trusses than they are designed for. They also found that the bridge vibrates excessively because of the rigidity of the joints and the lack of rigidity of the tension members, thereby causing more undue stresses in the members.

The railroad bridge, however, is in good shape, although it is somewhat out of date. The plate-girder bridges across the mill race at Springfield, too met with the approval of the class. These bridges are properly designed and cared for.

While inspecting the plate-girder bridges someone stole Professor Frink's overcoat, which he had left on the railing of the wagon bridge.

Requiescat in Pace

Rowdy was a good dog. The past tense is used advisedly, for last Sunday morning while the church bells were pealing, his young soul flitted dog-heaven-ward. Perhaps by this time he is barking an accompaniment to the music of the spheres—another dog star mayhap.

Till his young career was so untimely cut short he belonged to "Bill" Hayward and as a good dog should, followed obediently at his master's heels, guarded his master's house, and growled at his master's enemies, if indeed Bill ever had any.

Rowdy was a bull terrier and a likely looking pup—age, two years. He suffered from some mysterious disease. He received medical attention regularly and it was at the veterinary's that he expired.

The class in topographic surveying has planted three permanent monuments near Mechanical Hall, from which to make astronomical observations. These points are steel pins imbedded in a solid block of concrete two feet deep.

within 5 yards of the visitor's goal, but he was downed in his tracks and their line held like a wall.

O. A. C. played safe after getting in the lead and rested easy on their advantage. Keck and Bergman played a star game behind the little midget Reynolds and Captain Borleske once more distinguished himself by playing about the whole game for the locals.

The teams lined up as follows:

O. A. C.	Position	Whitman
Dunn	C.	Clemen
Hawley	L. G. R.	Matthews
Sendart, Wallace	R. G. L.	Morrow
Evenden, Davis	L. T. R.	Neil
Dinges	R. T. L.	Wilson
Huntley	L. E. R.	Fee
		Howard
Breithaupt	R. E. L.	Lewis
Gilbert, Reynolds	Q.	Belt
		Blackington
Endburg	L. H. R.	Borleske
Keck	F.	Dresser

TIME HAS COME FOR ORATORS TO GET TO WORK

Names of Those Trying Out Are Due Week From Monday

Two Contests for Oregon This Year—One at Eugene—Inter-Collegiate Is Goal of Beginners

One week from next Monday all who intend to enter the tryout for the Inter-collegiate Oratorical contest must hand their names to the committee on oratory and debate. On December 11 the preliminary tryout takes place to select five orators to enter the final contest on January 28th. One of these will then be chosen to represent Oregon at Salem early in March.

The University of Oregon will enter two oratorical contests this year: The "State Inter-collegiate" and the "Inter-state Oratorical." Any regular student of the university is eligible to try out and is free to choose his own subject. The representative in each is awarded the official oratory "O". The limit of words in the former contest is 1,500 and in the latter, 2,000. All orations must be typewritten and placed in the hands of the committee two weeks before any tryout.

The Inter-state Oratorical contest, between the Universities of Idaho, Washington, and Oregon, will be held in Eugene this year about the first of May. The preliminary tryout will be held on February 3rd and the finals on February 18th. Contestants must hand in their names before the second Monday in January. This contest is the goal of all orators in the university. It is the big oratorical affair of the year, and this year especially because it is to take place in Eugene. Cash prizes of 75 and 25 dollars are given to the two first place men.

For this very reason, however, the Inter-collegiate contest is more favorable to beginners. Many of the older men will not try out for it because their time is taken up in football and debate. These men will all be ready for the Interstate contest, leaving small chance for beginners.

B. H. Williams represented Oregon last year in the Inter-state contest and is the only veteran left in the university. He lays much emphasis on the fact that few men should take advantage of the Inter-collegiate contest to gain experience for the larger one.

Students from University of Oregon who are enrolled at Yale are Fred Kerr, Lloyd Mayer and Sam May.

Kerr is in the Yale Forest School and is preparing himself for the government service. He spent the past summer in the woods near Milford, Penna., getting practical experience. His course will take about three years, at the conclusion of which time he will be qualified to take a lucrative position.

Cary V. Loosley, Manager of the 1910 Oregon, has been forced to discontinue his course at the University on account of his eyes. He will leave for his home in Klamath Falls tonight.

YELLS AND SONGS ARE DISAPPOINTMENT

The yell and song contest was to have closed last Wednesday, but owing to lack of material, the committee decided to extend the time to Friday night. The committee in charge are disappointed with the songs, and the yells are not as good as was expected.

These yells will be printed as soon as possible, and by Thursday evening there will be copies distributed among the rooters in the grand stand. Yell Leader Alton, earnestly requests every student to get out and learn the yells and songs. Alton said today: "If we expect to compete favorably with O. A. C., who no doubt, will outnumber us ten to one, we must have practice. No more than twenty rooters have been consistently getting out to yell."

PIPE OF PEACE TO FOLLOW BATTLE'S ROAR

The roar of battle grows louder each hour as the braves of the Sophomore and freshmen classes strenuously train for the coming game. After a long "pow wow" between the two chiefs last Wednesday, it was decided to settle their differences Thursday evening on Kincaid field. The two teams are evenly matched and a good game is assured.

The individual players on both teams have all had experience in football. There is some talk of a peace conference at Alton's after the game—the peace pipe to be filled at the expense of the losing team.

To Hold Alumni Reunion

Are the members of the Oregon Alumni going to keep the ties that held them together in former years or will they drift apart? This is a question the senior often asks himself as the time for graduation approaches.

Melisa Hill, '01, has conceived a unique idea for renewing old acquaintances that will be of especial interest in this regard. On her farm at Castle Rock, Oregon, she is keeping a careful record of old graduates, where they go, and what changes occur in their names. She also has on file the names of any children they may have.

She intends to hold an alumni reunion just after each commencement, when all graduates will be expected to make themselves at home and live on the delicious cream from her five Jersey cows that she keeps especially for that purpose. Every one is extended a hearty invitation to visit her.

WOMEN'S CHORAL CLUB AND MIXED CHORUS PLANNED

Concerts and Oratorios Will Be Given During Year.

Music Department Has Many Good Singers—Gratifying Results Will Follow Earnest Work

A woman's Choral club and a large mixed chorus of from sixty to one hundred picked voices are to be organized at the University this year under the direction of the School of Music. They will be used for oratorios and concerts during the early spring.

Miss Eva Stinson of the music department, who is going to organize the woman's chorus, intends to start work within the next few days. She believes that she has already found a number of exceptionally fine voices and expects to give a concert in the spring and possibly an operatta.

Prof. I. M. Glen, Dean of the School of Music, will organize and take personal charge of the mixed chorus. They will study chorals and probably give an oratorio later on in the year.

In speaking of the chorus, Professor Glen said, "There are enough good voices in the university to make a large chorus. Many students have come to me asking for such an organization and if they will assure me that they will come regularly and take an interest in the work, I will be glad to direct them."

Junior Executive Committee

The president of the junior class has appointed the following members on his executive committee: Calvin Sweek, Cecil Espy, Mary Stiewer, Ada Coffey, and Percy Collier.

Mr. Terrill, of the local Y. M. C. A., formerly head of the department of mining in the University of Oregon, will deliver an address at the student assembly next Wednesday. No definite arrangements have yet been made for the assembly on the succeeding Wednesday, November 10, but suggestions have been made that it be taken by the students for a student program and rally. H. Williams president of the Student Body, says that he hopes that arrangements may be made definitely for such a meeting before the time of the football game with the O. A. C., for the purpose of stirring up "Oregon Spirit" for the big event.

The executive committee of the freshmen class, in a meeting Tuesday evening, condemned the action of the members of their class who, through ignorance of the customs at the University, painted their class numerals on the grand stand.

Marean Hurd, ex-'10, and Austin P. Farrington, ex-'11, have prepared themselves for the examinations for forest ranger. They have already been at work for some time, gaining practical experience in the rough and remote Lane County woods.
