

INTERESTING SIDE-LIGHTS ON THE GAME

(From the Washington Daily)

The crowd was forced to wait forty-five minutes after the time announced for the game, because Oliver Cutts took on an extra job at Tacoma, umpiring the Lincoln-Tacoma game. The Washington management was not at fault. Coach Forbes would not begin the game without Cutts, who was Oregon's choice among the officials. Later Coach Forbes consented and the teams were ready for the whistle when Cutts appeared. Coach Lewis of Broadway acted as heal linesman in Coach Allen's absence.

A hot argument ended the first half. Washington scored a touchdown and after the play Moulten, the Oregon time keeper, maintained that time was out before it was made. The Washington timer disputed this claim. Despite the fact that Moulten had no official stopwatch, Referee Hockenberry ruled in Oregon's favor.

For the first time in two years the Varsity's goal line was crossed.

For the second time in Coach Dobie's football career, he was scored on by a touchdown.

If Coach Dobie quits, it will be with an enviable record. He has yet to be defeated.

The longer each man played the better he seemed to get. Washington did not use a single substitute, something that seldom occurs in a championship game.

You hated to see it, didn't you, Pullman.

The rooting was the best ever. The Purple and Gold effect in the bleachers looked fine to those in the grandstands.

Oregon worked the end runs successfully the first few times; then she fell down in her attempts and could not gain consistently after that.

It was shown conclusively what punting can do toward winning a game. Eakins out-punted both Clarke and Latourette. His 60-yard boot soon after the opening of the first half, put the ball far down in Oregon's territory and the first touchdown soon followed.

Oliver Cutts has a fine eye for discovering technical flaws.

Warren Grimm certainly handles the forward pass well. Twice he grabbed the ball out of the air, carrying it over for touchdowns.

Counting too much on the wind cost Washington a goal after the second touchdown.

Taylor was everywhere, carrying the ball, start forward passes, recovering, receiving punts and making interference.

Coyle had an off day in catching punts, but he used judgment in running the team and he annexed three points by a drop kick over the bar.

Several times Oregon's line could not hold when a forward pass was attempted, and she was thrown back for losses.

Oregon's touchdown was the result of two big runs, one around right end and the other around the left. Each runner had fine interference.

Oregon has two wonderful ends in Hickson and Kiltz. Their getting down on punts was classy.

It was great to see the handling of Eakins' punts by Oregon's backfield men, especially Latourette. He caught them in every manner imaginable and that is saying a good deal for him, considering the kind of punts Eakins dispenses.

Twice Eakins tried goal from place-men, but failed each time owing to the distance from the uprights.

On the kick-off following Washington's second touchdown, Umpire Cutts declared Oregon offside, but allowed the play to go on.

Mattson played speedy ball. He got off well after receiving a forward pass, but unfortunately touched the white line and was called back.

Coach Dobie broke into the game, catching one of Clarke's punts, while standing on the side line. It was Washington's ball.

Clarke did not play the entire game. He became winded and, much against his will, was retired.

Warren Grimes made the last touchdown on a forward pass, netting seventy-five yards, and in covering the distance he shook off all kinds of Oregon men.

FIRST CONTEST GETS OUT BEST DEBATERS

With twelve whirlwind debaters contesting hotly for places, the first tryout of the four to be held for the purpose of choosing the Oregon-Utah team, was held last night in Villard Hall. The new plan worked with unexpected success.

Though the number entering was not as large as hoped for, every one was out in earnest and the judges were unanimous in the opinion that it was an exceptionally good showing. Four of the contestants were freshmen, four were sophomores, and there were two juniors and two seniors. The new men showed up especially well, Coach Buchen declaring that there might be some surprises when the results were announced if all the four tryouts went like the first one.

Over thirty men were intending to try out but many of them preferred to wait for the triangular teams. The reason for this is that in the present case, only two men are to be selected, while in the later tryout there is room for six. Coach Buchen says that it would pay everyone to enter both tryouts for the practice. He is trying to persuade others to enter the three remaining contests with this object in view.

Robison, Nicholas, and Collier, three men from last year's teams were on hand last night and there is a chance that Leon Ray may be persuaded to get into the rest of the contests. Burleigh Cash, alternate last year is also working hard, as is Ben Williams, last year's interstate orator. The two new men who are looked upon as coming debaters are Warner and Spencer. The former led the Pendleton High School team last year.

Winn Nicholas and Wendel Barbour, who showed up well last year, are again out. Zimmerman, McFarland, and Pickett are the three freshmen who complete the list entering last night's contest. No co-eds tried this year owing to the fate that a special debate has been arranged for them.

The judges of the contest are Coach Buchen, Professor Glen, Professor De-Cou, and Dr. Gilbert. The next contest in the series is scheduled for Friday afternoon, commencing at one o'clock.

Coach and Players Rewarded.

University of Washington, Nov. 27.—To show their appreciation of his services the students of the University of Washington hailed Coach Gilmour Dobie onto the stage at assembly Wednesday and presented him with a fine gold watch. The co-eds gave the players and the second team men varsity stick pins.

A city paper states that Oregon will protest Eakins and Mucklestone next year. Not much anxiety is felt by the students over the outcome if the action is taken. The men were protested last year, but the faculty thoroughly investigated their records and declared them eligible to play in their freshman year.

According to the article Oregon will maintain that both men played two years on the North Dakota team. The Washington faculty is extremely strict in regard to eligibility and scholastic standing. So strict, in fact, that at times students protest on the ground that the action hurts the institution. On account of this the students feel that it is a little absurd to hold that the men would be permitted to play if there was any ground for the allegation, especially as the men were kept out of some of the games last year pending the verdict of the faculty and the North Dakota president, to whom the case was submitted for an official opinion. He held that the men were eligible under conference rules.

Wm. Kiltz Oregon's great end was severely injured in the game Thursday. At present he is in a Seattle hospital and it is not known how serious his case may become.

Dorm Bucks at City Water

In spite of the fact that they have had to carry all their drinking water up stairs for four years, the roomers in the Men's Dormitory are still unwilling to have unboiled city water piped into the new fountains. They are all loudly complaining against the use of "typhoid straight" as they term the new beverage. "No Springfield sewerage and typhoid bugs for mine," said one of them today, "even if I have to go clear to the pump for a drink. I hate to have to drink water anyway, but what I do drink, I want pure."

Some one has spread the report that the river just above town is a favorite bathing place for hobos and railroad laborers. The boys claim that the city water is pumped from the river and is unfit for drinking after being used for bathing. "Worse than bugs," they say. Most of them are providing themselves with canteens to keep in their rooms.

Celia Hager, '12, entertained for a few friends Saturday evening. A very pleasant time was reported by the guests.

Miss Lorence of Monmotuh, who has been visiting her sister, Mabel, has returned home.
