JUDGE WILLIAMS' WORK
PRAISED IN UNANIMOUS
RESOLUTION

President Campbell Talks On Life of Great Statesman--Urges
Students to Boost for Varsity.

The following resolution, presented by Prof. F. G. Young, was passed by the students and faculty this morning at assembly, following the address by President Campbell on the life of the late Judge George H. Williams:

"The citizenship of Oregon, and of the nation at large, should and will today turn in thought to the memory of one who was Oregon's most illustrious citizen. His great meed of honor was won wholly through constructive service to the public weal. It is meet, therefore, that we associated here as the University of Oregon, with our largest and most distinctive purpose that of preparation for and performance of the best service for the common good, should as a body turn to pay some humble tribute to his memory. In so doing we honor ourselves and will be led to emulate him.

"I submit, therefore, that this University resolve, that it express a sense of deepest gratitude for Judge George H. Williams' pre-eminent services to Oregon and to our nation; that it admires his abounding loyalty to the largest and highest good, his statesmanship as a leader in the affairs of this nation in times of greatest crises; that it honors him for his resplendent virtues as a citizen and as a man."

In speaking of the work of Judge Williams for his state and nation, President Campbell briefly reviewed the significant facts of his life as follows:

"He was born in the state of New York in 1823. Preparing for law, he went to Iowa, then the far West; and by his energetic, persevering life, soon became one of the leading lawyers of the state.

"By his appointment as chief justice of the Oregon Territory in 1852, he began work in national affairs. After serving his term in this office he went to Portland to practice law. About this time the question of the Oregon constitution came up and Judge Williams had a great part in its forming.

"When the question of slavery became a national one, he allied himself with the anti-slavery side and was elected to the United States senate in 1864. The bill for reconstruction and the fourteenth amendment were of his forming.

"At the beginning of President Grant's term Judge Williams was appointed attorney general, and it was by his efforts that the work of the Ku Klux Klan was crushed. In doing this he made many enemies, whose opposition caused him to refuse the appointment as chief justice.

"In 1880, Judge Williams retired from national life, taking up the practice of law at Portland, which he continued until his death, with the exception of the time he was mayor of Portland."

In summing up the characteristics of Judge Williams, President Campbell said: "He was a man who believed in leading an active life, who trusted his fellow men, honored his country, and had a deep religious nature. He was the type of man who does everything in the open, and who showed his interest in all lines of work."

Following this, President Campbell spoke of the "get-together" movement which has been started in the Univer-
