DRAMATIC CLUB PLAY IS A GREAT SUCCESS

ACTORS SHOW SUPERIOR
ABILITY IN RENDERING DIFFICULT PARTS

Characters Were Well Sustained and Audience Is Enthusiastic.

"The Professor's Love Story," presented last Thursday evening at the Eugene Theater, scored a great success for the Dramatic Club. Under the competent directorship of Professor Irving M. Glen, the cast was able to produce one of the best plays ever given by the Oregon students and to establish the Dramatic Club as an important organization among student activities. The story is of an absent-minded professor, so absent-minded, in fact, that he is absolutely at a loss without his maid, Effie, who constantly reminded him of some of his forgotten intentions.

The Professor was watched over by his sister, Miss Goodwillie, but he sometimes acted without consulting her, and it was on one of these occasions that he engaged a good looking young lady to act as his secretary. He falls in love with her, without realizing what is the matter with him. Even his worthy friend, Dr. Cousens, is baffled by his mysterious disease. But soon both the doctor and the secretary find out the ailment and the doctor feels it his duty to acquaint the Professor with his knowledge. The Professor decides to leave London, but since he is unable to determine the person with whom he is in love, he takes the very one, his secretary, with him.

There is a pretty young dowager, Lady Gilding, who desires to marry the Professor, "he is so different from the other men, she knows." All her plans to captivate him fail, however, while the attempts of Miss Goodwillie to prevent his marrying the secretary are equally unsuccessful.

Victor Voigt, in the leading role of the Professor, carried out his part perfectly. He was a typical, ideal college professor.

Miss Ruth Duniway took the part of the secretary, and showed remarkable dramatic talent. One could not blame the Professor for forgetting his books and work in her charming society.

Juliet Cross, as the young dowager, was particularly attractive and deserves especial praise for the successful rendition of a difficult part.

Another difficult part, carried out with equal ability, was that played by Maud Beals as the hard-hearted sister of the Professor.

The two doctors, Lee Caulfield and Lair Gregory, were both clever actors.

The other members of the cast, who contributed much toward its success, were: Naomi Williamson as the charming maid, Effie; F. E. Dunton and Roland Kennedy, her two ardent admirers; and E. J. Himes and Bertha Cummings, who, as Sir George and Lady Gilding, executed strenuous efforts in helping their stepmother, the dowager, toward success.

On the whole, this first large play given by the Dramatic Club scored a tremendous success. The members of the cast were the recipients of many beautiful bouquets from an enthusiastic audience.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN ADDRESSES ASSEMBLY

Evolution of Oregon Territory Described by Brigadier General Beadle

Brigadier General Beadle, a veteran of the civil war and Ex-President of the State Normal College of South Dakota, spoke before the assembly Wednesday on the "Evolution of Oregon Territory." General Beadle has watched the growth of the West since its pioneer days, when the Oregon trail was marked by the graves of massacred white men, up to the present day, when there is comparatively little unsettled territory in this part of the country.

General Beadle spoke of the part a University plays in the history of a state. He called the present students of the University of Oregon the coming rulers of our state. They hold the destiny of Oregon in their hands, and as they are trained in reliability and integrity, so will the state be governed by honest and reliable men.

General Beadle is the father of Mrs. Frink, and has many friends among the faculty of the University. For that reason, and also because the college marks the growth of the state, he feels a keen interest in the development of this institution.

JUNIOR ORATORS TELL THEIR AIMS AND IDEALS

SUBJECTS RANGE FROM HERETICS TO GREEK LEAGUES

Scholarly Addresses and Excellent Music Make Oratoricals a Success.

The crowning event of University Day was the twenty-first annual Junior Orations, held in Villard Hall Friday night.

The Juniors may well be proud of the talent chosen (from their numbers) to represent their class. The orations showed careful preparation and were unusually well delivered.

Before the orators were introduced several musical numbers were given by prominent Juniors.

Melvin Ogden played a piano solo, which delighted the audience. Miss Mary DeBar's violin solo was well received. Miss Lilah Prosser, as usual, was enthusiastically received, and sang Chadwick's "O, Let Night Speak of Me." In

WOMEN TO MAJOR IN PHYSICAL CULTURE

Doctor Stuart Plans Attractive Courses For Future Gymnasium Instructors

Next year it will be possible for Oregon women to do major work in physical culture. Doctor Bertha Stuart has arranged a course including such subjects as Botany and Sanitary Hygiene, which will fully equip girls to fill positions as physical culture directors.

This enlarged department will be installed in splendidly equipped quarters. With the $5,000 appropriation, the "Little Church" will be remodeled into a women's gymnasium, which will be a credit to Oregon. Thirty-five shower baths, forty dressing rooms, and two hundred and fifty lockers are a few of the new features being added on the basement floor.

On the ground floors repairs are just as extensive. New floors will be laid and newly ceiled walls will take the place of broken plaster.

Besides the regular gymnasium work, consisting of drills, military marching, fancy dancing, dumb bell and Indian

STUDENTS CELEBRATE UNIVERSITY DAY

LARGE FORCES MAKE NEEDED IMPROVEMENTS
ON CAMPUS

Outdoor Luncheon Was Novel
Feature of Day—Hundreds of People Served.

Between seven and eight hundred students and visitors were on the campus yesterday, celebrating University Day. The men spent the morning at work improving the campus, while the girls prepared lunch. At noon lunch was eaten on the campus. A track meet with O. A. C. was the attraction in the afternoon, and Junior orations, in Villard Hall, in the evening, ended the program.

The weather was almost ideal for University Day work. Although the sunshine was bright, it was not warm enough to be uncomfortable. From 8:00 o'clock until noon many needed improvements were made on the campus by the men. George Poskey superintended the building of a cement walk between Deady and A street. About sixty men worked during the morning. An enthusiastic force of students, led by Percy Collier, painted the large "O" on Skinner's butte. Chester Downs and his efficient aids are responsible for a splendid addition to our numerous tennis courts. Other men made extensive improvements on the athletic field and elsewhere on the campus. Faculty members, as well as students, armed themselves with hammers, saws and paint brushes, and put their best efforts in the morning's work.

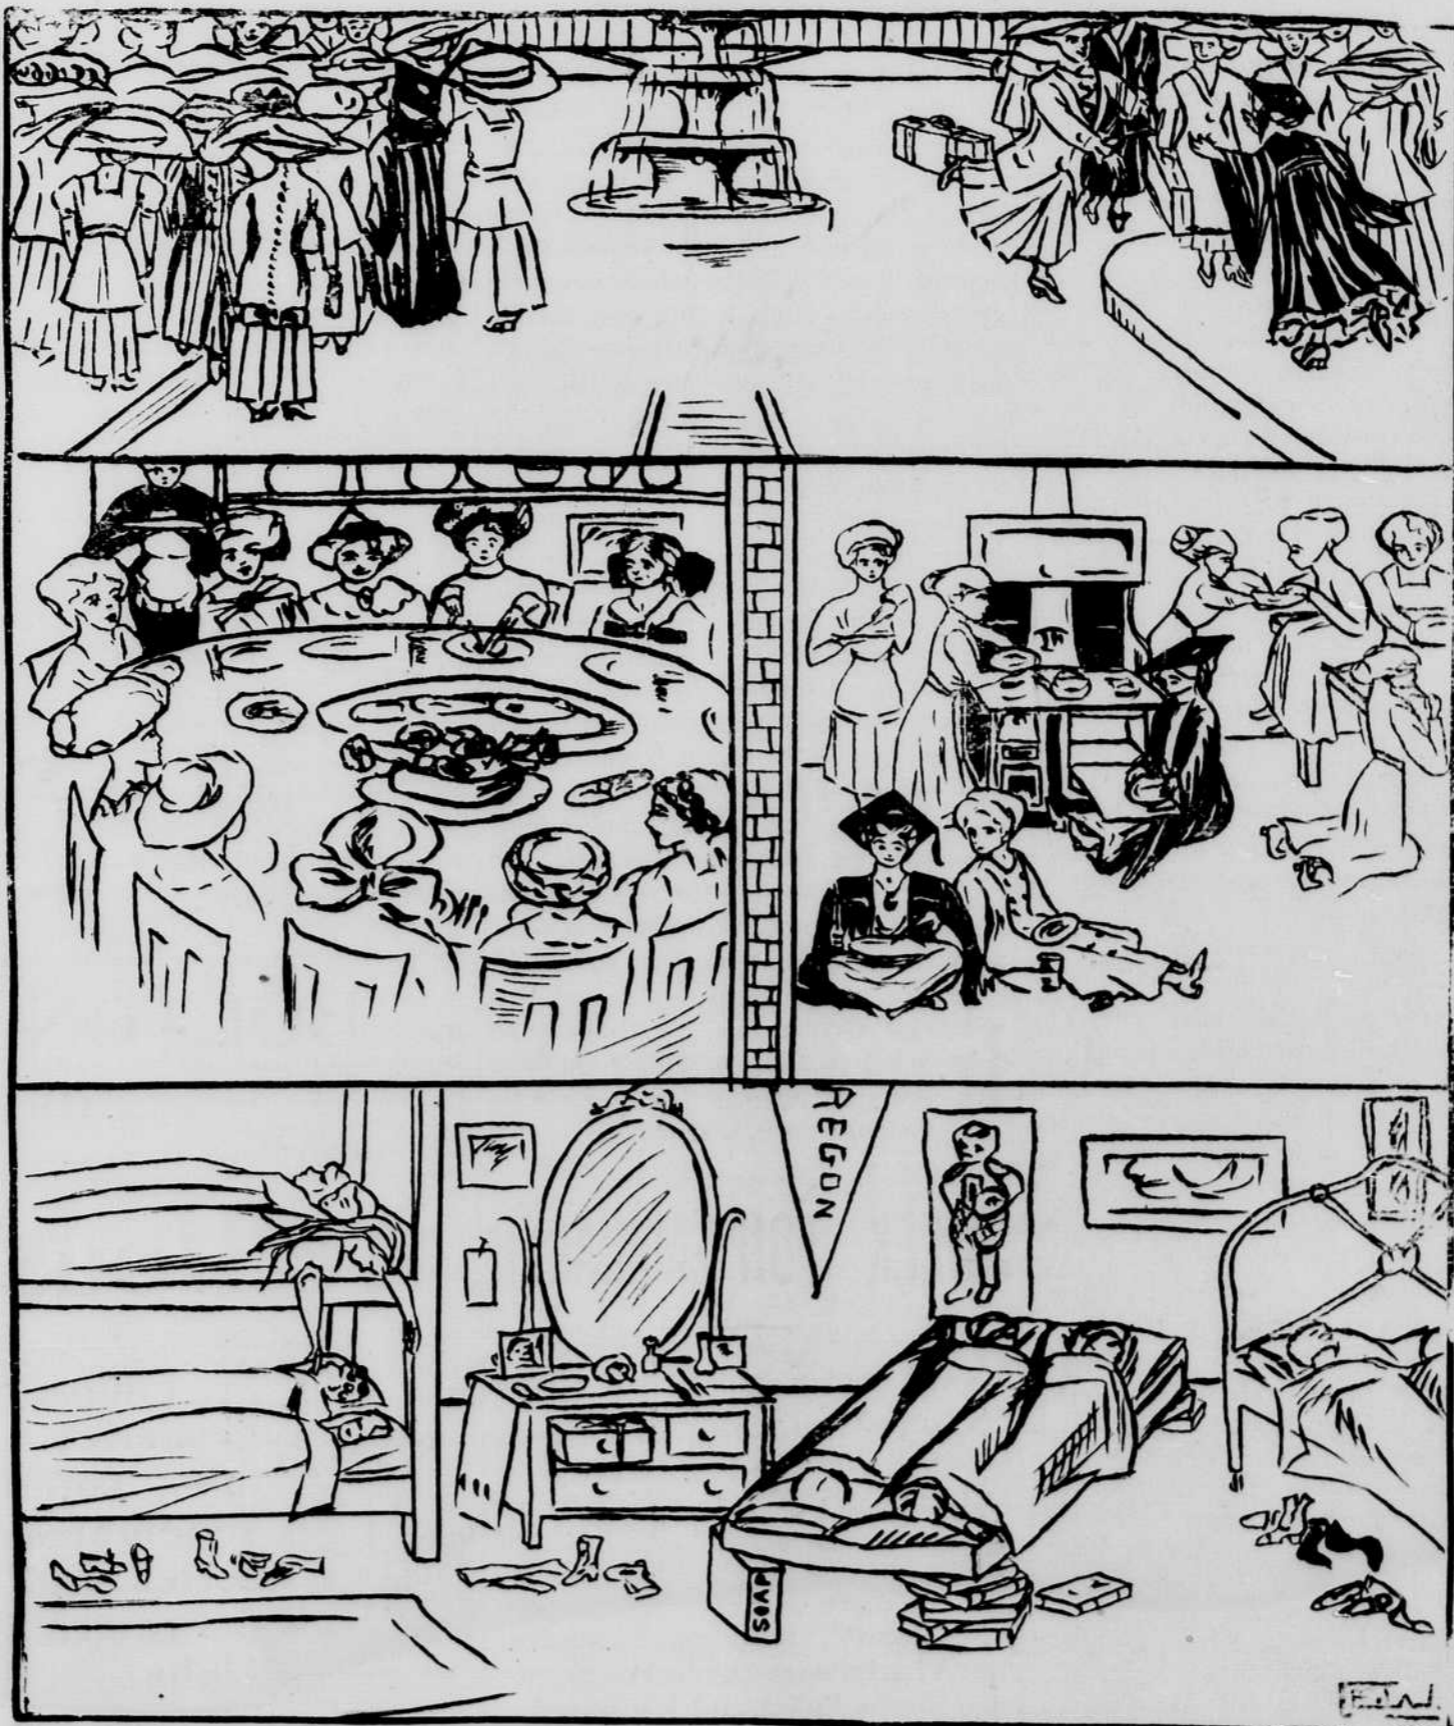

The girls of the University, under an executive committee consisting of Bertha Dorris, Ruth Hansen, Marion Stowe, Cecile Wilcox, Fay Clark, Maybelle Larsen, Hazel Fields and Alice Farnsworth, prepared lunch. Tables presided over by members of the four classes were spread on the lawn between the men's dormitory and McClure Hall. The color schemes of the various classes were carried out in the decorations. A few of the girls assisting at the tables were: For the seniors, Ruth Hansen, Bertha Comings and Eva Allen; for the juniors, Conifred Hurd, Lilah Clark, Marion Stowe, Naomi Williamson and Helen Beach; at the sophomore table, Birdie Wise, Lucia Campbell, Alice Larsen, Hazel McKown, Jessie Bibee and Ruth Howell; and at the freshman table, Corinne Degermark, Lenore Hansen, Nellie Hemenway, Elizabeth Busch, Ethel Clarke, Florence Bonnell and Bess Lewis.

The large crowd, seated on the lawn or standing in groups under the trees, made a beautiful picture.

After lunch had been served, the Glee Club members gave an exhibition of true Oregon spirit by singing several rousing college songs.

As the guests left the campus they were presented with souvenirs of week-end in the form of booklets containing a complete program of University Day and the various committees under whose direction the work was done.

Four automobile parties drove up from Corvallis yesterday, and several more came this morning, to attend the baseball games.
