

PENDLETON HIGH WINS REGENTS DEBATE CUP

ing definitely the plan proposed by the Eugene team. Despite the fact that Mr. Young had so many technical details to deal with, he held the interest of all.

James Hartwell, the third speaker for the negative, advanced and explained their proposed plan of postal savings banks, and closed by giving a detailed comparison of the plans advanced by both teams. He showed wherein the former was theoretical, while the latter was practical. Mr. Hartwell was perhaps the most convincing speaker of the evening.

The negative rebuttal was given by Mr. Crockett, who attacked the plan of the affirmative as too visionary and not to be compared to insurance.

Mr. Kellems, in his rebuttal, took the stand that the negative was debating affirmatively, and used his time in discussion of this phase.

The judges, Professors G. P. Matthews, Oregon Agricultural College, Kirk, Willamette University, and Elizabeth Irvine, Albany College, gave a unanimous decision in favor of the negative.

President Campbell presented the Regents' cup to the Pendleton team.

DISSENTION CREATED BY SKULL AND CHAIN

great misnomer, and should not be tolerated by the students at large."

Clarence Steele, manager of oratory and debate, said: "The new organization is most unfortunate, both in its selection of unimportant men for members and the consequences of factional feeling which are liable to result. This movement has given a greater blow to harmony and real college spirit than anything done in the four years since I have been in college."

Roy Terry, manager of various student body and class enterprises, said: "When five fraternities are all there is to the University, then the new society will deserve the title of the senior honor society, but not until."

Harold Dalzell said: "A senior honor society, composed of the honor men of the class, and organized by and having the backing of the entire senior class, would be a fine tradition for the class of '10 to leave. But such an organization as the one that is masquerading under the name of the senior honor society, representing, as it does, not the honor students of the class, but the men of some of the leading fraternities, is both a farce and an imposition on the class. The members of the senior class should make it a point to stand against such a move as this, which will only breed dissension and serve to overthrow the democratic Oregon spirit of which we are all so proud."

Leon Ray, who led the negative debating team to victory last winter, said: "When the students of the University have become imbeciles and corpses, then such a raw deal can pass unprotected, but not until."

Wilshire Bristow, prominent Oregon track man, said: "These people say that they are not confined to certain fraternities. Well, actions speak louder and with more truth than words."

These quotations voice the almost unanimous sentiment of the student body. So great has become the feeling that a resolution will be presented at the next meeting of the senior class denying to the organization the use of the name Senior Honor Society.

Later: As the Emerald goes to press it is learned that it will be necessary to hold the Student Body meeting on Tuesday at 4 instead of Monday.

of our religion. We must not hesitate to investigate it thoroughly, for the greater understanding means the firmer faith. Christianity meets the one great need of the human heart. You have no realization of what Christianity will mean for you until you have come to the place of real test, where there seems to be no way out of the difficulty. Then it will appear with its true value. The one incontrovertible argument for Christianity is the personal experience of those to whom it has been priceless in the time of need. You are building now the most precious possession you can have in your declining year. The skim milk kind of life, no motive, no purpose, no great conception of the responsibility of life is the pitiful thing. The man to whom life has been worth while is the one who has shouldered more than his share of the responsibility and has made himself of value to his fellow men."
