PRESIDENT CAMPBELL ADDRESSES ASSEMBLY

Delivers Able Exposition of Life of Greatest Russian Writer,
Tolstoi

This morning's assembly address was given by President Campbell, who spoke on Tolstoi.

In opening his address, he stated that he approached the subject from the layman's point of view, dealing mainly with the effects of the life and writings of the great Russian upon present day society. Several movements which are attracting much attention can be traced, in part, he asserted, directly to the influence of Tolstoi. Prominent among these are the idea of the obligation of personal wealth for social service, the simple life movement, and the movement toward a more simple Christianity.

In outlining the life of Tolstoi, he divided it into three approximate periods. The first, to the conclusion of his university career at the age of 23. The second, a space of about thirty years in which he played the part of soldier, writer, and man of the world. About fifteen of his books were produced in this period. The third period covers the last thirty years of the writer's life. During this time he was author, social reformer, and philosopher. About the same number of books were produced in this period as in the second.

The speaker then brought the story of Tolstoi's life up to the point where he became despondent over the problem of life, and told how he finally solved for himself that momentous question by observing the happy lives of the peasants and determining to model his life after them.

In measuring up the teaching of the great novelist, President Campbell said that the great thing which we get out of it is that there is something worth while. We need not go as far as he and accept his solution, but that solution is at least interesting.

Before the address, the audience was favored with a musical selection by Miss Mary DeBar, Mrs. Stackpole and Mr. Marion.

VENI VEDI BUT NOT VICI SAY RETURNED DEBATERS

Coach Buchen, Zim and Ray Report
the Best of Treatment From Utah

Coach Buchen and his ship subsidy supporters, Zimmerman and Ray, returned Monday from Salt Lake City, where they endeavored unsuccessfully to convince the gentlemen by the inland sea of the necessity of such legislation. They were met at the train by a small but select and enthusiastic crowd of students, under the leadership of Yell Leader Robison, and were greeted with several vociferous Oskies.

They report a pleasant trip and excellent treatment at the hands of their opponents.

Practically the same line of argument was used by the Oregon men as that which they used so successfully against Washington the previous Friday. They consider their defeat to be largely due to the fact that the Utah men had learned their essential arguments through press reports, and were well prepared to answer them. However, the Oregon team defended their case to the last and at the close of the debate every one was in doubt as to the result. Several Utah people said: "It might just as easily have been one way as the other."

After the contest the teams were banqueted at the Hotel Louvre and the next day were entertained by the Sigma Chi fraternity the only national of Utah. The Oregon men give special praise to the spirit of good fellowship displayed by the Utah students and the generous way in which they cheered for Oregon both before and after the debate.
