CLASS OF 1913 MAKES EARLY START ON PAPER

Many New Features of College Life
Will Add to Interest of Later
Students at University

The 1913 Oregana staff has commenced its work. Assignments have been given to members of the staff and elaborate plans have been made. Among other new features will be a complete write-up illustrated by many cuts, of Commencement week—a feature which has been entirely neglected in previous annuals. The College Life department will be much enlarged and improved with interesting pictures and personals. Editor-in-chief Outhauk has secured a splendid kodak for the purpose of securing plenty of interesting photographs. He has appointed Lloyd Barzee his associate editor and to assist Fern Waite with the College Life department. Dan Mitchel will take charge of the Athletics, Lucile Abrams will have the Literary and Art departments. Nell Hemenway will have charge of the Fraternities and Clubs, and Elizabeth Lewis will look after the Student Organizations. Herbert Strong, the business manager has appointed Allyn Roberts his assistant.

The 1912 staff has finished its work and deserves much praise and credit for the excellent book which they have put out. Among their special features are cuts of the Junior class and the use of color in the frontispiece and a few headings. Many cuts of interest about the campus also add to the book's attractiveness.

The staff for 1912's Oregana was composed of: Chester Moores, editor-in-chief, Wendel Barbour, business manager; Lucia Campbell, W. M. Huntington, Jessie Bibee, Martin Hawkins, Arthur Lewis, Birdie Wise, A. E. Houston, Rex Turner, John Kelly, and Elwood Luckey.

The class of 1902 was the first class in the University to issue an annual which was known as the "Webfoot".

This book is very interesting and attractive, although much smaller and more limited in scope than the present issue. Each year's annual has marked a great improvement over those of the preceding years, while 1913's gives promise of leaving all the others miles behind in the race.

In 1908, the word "Oregana" was chosen as a permanent name for all Junior annuals and henceforth they will be known as "19—'s Oregana".

The University of Michigan gives eight units credit in the course in journalism for work on college publications.

REHEARSALS FOR SENIOR PLAY HAVE BEGUN

Coach Hammond and the Members of the Cast Are Working Hard.

Under the able direction of James G. Hammond, rehearsals for the Senior play, which will be given in the Eugene Theater May 27, have begun. The cast is already in excellent shape but a few touches being needed to complete the production. The play is filled with the true college atmosphere and cannot fail to appeal to every University student. The story is one of a man just out of college who starts in business and begins to fight a pickle trust. It is true example of and up-to-date college man of today versus an old-fashioned man of business. Plots and counter-plots follow the hero through his business career but finally he wins out and secures the daughter of his competitor. From beginning to end, complications and laughs are brought in by all kinds of characters. There is the old-fashioned business man of the past and the up-to-date man of the present. The aesthetic college professor, the go-asness woman; the gum-chewing stenographer; the wife of the newly-rich; and last but not least the heroine of the plot who is a sweet lass full of lovable qualities. Besides these characters there is a large supporting cast full of pip and gaiety. The leading characters are being taken by Leslie Dobie, Tom Burke, Melvin Ogden, Francis Curtis, George White, Dean Collins, Juliet Cross, Madge Hamble, Jessie Calkins, Pearl Wilbur, Willetta Wright, and Mary De Bar.

The class of 1911 was more than fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Hammond and from present indications the play promises to more than fulfill expectations and eclipse all former records. Not only the class but the University as a whole is greatly indebted to Mr. Hammond for his services which he offered entirely without recompense.

Y. W. C. A. Cabinet Meets

The cabinet of the Y. W. C. A. met with the Advisory Board on Tuesday to make plans for the next year. One of the principle items of business was selecting a new general secretary. Mrs. Brown is going to Portland next year and that leaves the girls to look for another. Several were suggested, the only one of which that received any undue approbation being Mrs. Clark. It is hoped that she will accept the position, in that she is already familiar with the work

THE COUNTY FAIR A VERY PLEASING EVENT

The Stunts Were the Cleverest Ever Given at any Party
Heretofore.

The Y. W. C. A. gave a very successful entertainment last February in the men's gymnasium. The "County Fair" which was highly enjoyed by all was certainly the event of the month, both financially and socially.

The enormous success of the evening was due to the fact that almost every club and fraternity in college took part and spared no effort to make their show the feature of the evening. The candy table, the maids with confetti, and ice cream booths offered attractions for all tastes. The air fairly rang with the calls of the "spielers" as they vied with one another to lure the curious to part with their nickels and dimes. The touching cries and gurgles of the incubator babes proved to be sounds which touched the purse strings as well as the heart strings of the visitors since the babies headed the list of the gate receipts.

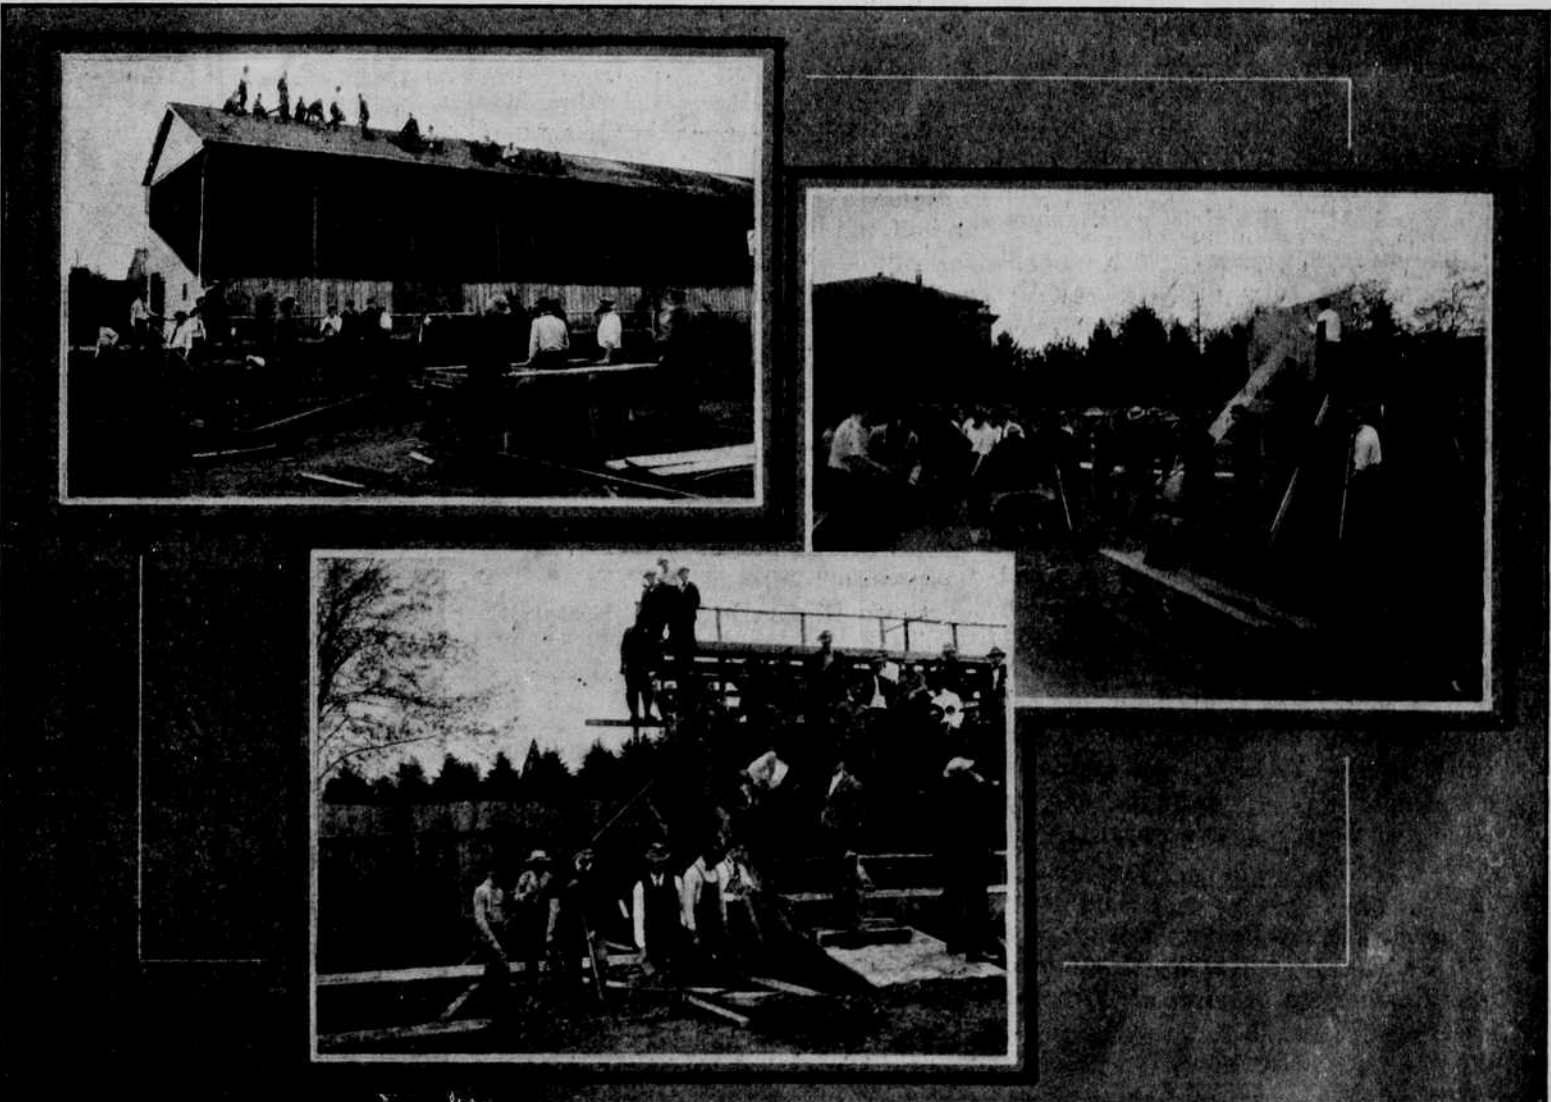

Our thoughts were turned into aesthetic channels when we tried to fling a garland of roses over the attractive heads of the damsels in the "Ring Around the Rosey" booth. Bill Fiser, as an organ grinder and Abe Blackman as the proverbial monkey gave a typical "County Fair" aspect to the whole. A host of reckless spenders received sudden shocks from the finger tips of "Dorina", the electrified wonder.

Old and young abandoned their dignity and pride to take a thrilling slide down the slippery Chute-the-chutes, which landed its unsuspecting victims suddenly in carefully "boiled" water.

The Orpheum circuit gave the lovers of true melodrama and contortionists generous returns for the dime so loudly called for at the entrance. The headliner of the evening was the twenty minstrel men with their original songs, dances, and hits on the noticeable characteristics of the faculty and the well known students.

The whole was such a conspicuous success that the Y. W. C. A. has determined to make the "County Fair" an annual event, as it is a popular and easy way of raising money for a worthy cause.

and all the association girls have learned to value and respect her judgment. All unite in the wish that she may be our next General Secretary.
