Examination and the press of eleventh hour preparation overtook the Emerald's editor and staff last Wednesday, and the paper did not appear. It was one of the rare occasions on which studies necessarily interfered with college educations.

With this final issue of volume II, the present editor lays aside the editorial pen, or rather racketsy typewriter, and discontinues forever the ponderous editorial "We." No longer will he speak ex cathedra, to the eager, rapt multitudes. The world in general, and this college in particular must worry along without his guidance and advice on every conceivable topic. Except for help from commencement day orators, the universe must run itself.

There is, however, a glimmer of hope in the prospect. The editorial toga falls upon an unusually capable man. Next year's staff will be exceptionally strong, and the Emerald is certain to improve and grow into its greater possibilities.

The greatest regret of the retiring editor is that he was unable to fulfill his rash promise further to expand the Emerald to six pages or increase it to a tri-weekly. From the news department, either of the proposed changes was practical, but there was the all important money side to be considered, and the expansion could not be financed.

On the other hand, "we" have much to be thankful for. Due to the help of a faithful and efficient staff, the editorial work was lighter and the precedent that editors flunk out, was broken. Our readers were lenient in judging mistakes. Every issue of the paper offended someone, throughout the year, yet, the editor was not thrashed and only five of his former friends have forgotten him.

All in all, editing the Emerald, has been a most pleasant, profitable, and above all an interesting undertaking, and if the editor has justified the confidence reposed in him by the student body, he feels amply repaid, even if salaries are lacking.—Vale.

There is a deep obligation devolving upon those of us who remain for Commencement, to see that the returning alumni are properly received and made to feel at home. Oregon is particularly fortunate in its alumni. They have made the college what it is and stand ready to assist in every way possible whenever called upon. Let's give the returning old grads a hearty welcome, and show that we of the succeeding generations are keeping their memories green, and are not forgetting the great deeds they wrought for Old Oregon.

Thirty-two victories out of forty-three intercollegiate contests, is a very respectable showing for any college. Victory is an Oregon tradition, and it will please the returning alumni to learn that the custom they established is being preserved, even unto the third and fourth generations.

Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, and Juno, the goddess of marriage, are now traditional enemies. Now that "Skipper is domesticated, he must stop philosophizing. Let us hope he will cease proclaiming his weird theories and settle down into the harmless married man. Here's all kinds of happiness to you, "Skipper," for any man who edits the Emerald a year deserves lots of it.

IN 43 INTERCOLLEGIATE CONTESTS "U" WINS 32

Percentage of Victory For Whole Year Is High At 744

A resume of the collegiate year just closing shows that Oregon participated in 43 inter-collegiate contests and made the very creditable record of winning 32 of these. In these contests all the Northwest colleges have been met as well as Utah, California and Stanford. Figured by percentage of victory the rating of the Lemon teams is 744, which is a quite respectable showing for any college.

Baseball, with a rating of 571, was the least successful activity and inter-collegiate football the best, as no game was lost to a college team.

Championships were won in track forensics and tennis and in football, baseball and basketball Oregon finished second of the Conference teams.

The synopsis of the year's contests are as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Football	4	0
Track	3	4
Baseball	8	6
Forensics	5	1
Basketball	11	3
Tennis	1	0
	32	11
