DR. SCHAFFER READS PAPER ON SCHOOLS

Says Standard for Entrance to the Universities Should Be Changed.

Prof. Shafer spoke on the subject, "Who Should Go to College, and Why," at assembly today.

A large Eastern college, he said, has changed the requirements, so that four of the fourteen entrance credits may be from vocational subjects; such as commercial studies, agriculture, carpentry, or manual training, and domestic science. This was necessary to adapt the college system to the high school curricula. The preparatory schools now are more a continuation of the grades, and they finish the student's education rather than prepare him for college. In agricultural regions, the high schools naturally become agricultural in their courses, and the colleges can not shut their doors on these students.

It is a prevalent fallacy that the high school education is the foundation for college work, when it is intelligence that should be the standard. Too many high school students are pushed through to college without adequate competency. This is the reason for so many failures among college graduates. The certificate system of entrance is not a fair test; it is too easy for those who have been carried along from grade to grade. A system of individual questioning would be more just.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Spangler, of the Congregational Church. Miss Ruth Davis played a piano solo, which was highly appreciated.
