An End and a Beginning.

This is the last Emerald we will publish this semester. The first issue in the second semester will appear Wednesday, February 14, 1912. We thank the members of the staff for their constant work and hearty co-operation during the past five months, and we appreciate the interest the public has displayed in the small sheet we edit.

During the next semester we hope to raise the standard of the Emerald, to cover the campus news more thoroughly, use better English in our stories, and to be as discreet as possible in the presentation of the contents.

Every member of the staff who desires it, may continue a member, and all other students who wish to enter the field of college journalism, will be offered a chance to show their ability.

It will not be possible to enlarge the Emerald. Our ambition to do so was killed soon after school began, when the manager reported that it would be impossible to increase the size of the advertising space, but we will put up the present amount of space as best we can and comfort ourselves with the thought that things might be worse.

A Timely Remark.

Please may we have some clocks in the Men's Gymnasium; one in the auditorium and one in the large dressing room? We don't ask for really and truly clocks with pendulums and eight-day works, just Ingersolls hung on nails will serve the purpose. The other day several of us who hate to be tardy to any class, were five minutes behind time getting to our recitation in Boreyouawefully, just because we had no way of telling how long we were swinging the dumbbells, and last night one of our most prominent students suddenly found himself in total darkness, as he was in the act of placing his tie pin in his new purple cravat, simply because he did not know it was so near six o'clock. This student informs us that if there had been a clock on the wall, he would have known what time it was and would have stuck his tie pin in his new purple cravat before he put on his shoes, because he can find his shoes in any kind of light.

After all these foregoing and conclusive proofs, we hope that the state can find time to place some time on the gym walls, so that we can always be next to the time we spend in that building.—Ephriam Eps.

The idea of holding a Matinee dance Saturday afternoon, February 10, in the Men's Gymnasium, is a good one, we think. At last, we can see if we really enjoy a truly informal dance where neither men nor women appear in their best clothes and at which everyone mixes in a democratic manner. Miss Ruth Dunway seems to have originated the idea and predicts that everyone will find it a pleasant affair. There will be the usual five-piece orchestra, the floor will be put in shape and the admission has been made so low that even an editor can attend. It is to be hoped that every student in the University will avail himself or herself of this opportunity to mix in a general frolic with fellow students, and help keep alive that true democratic spirit for which Oregon has always been famous.

SAGE OF PODUNK

'Tis a good will that no lawyer makes bad.

Don't knock, there is always someone else that can hit harder than you can.

There is lots of room at the top, but that don't prevent it from being mighty lonesome there.

He that flunks and goes away, Will not be back this year, they say.

Eutaxian Society Meets.

The Eutaxian Literary Society held its meeting last evening in Dr. Schaffer's room. Current events were given by Lilah Sengstake. Prof. Reddie gave several delightful readings in both the serious and lighter vein.

The next meeting will be a social one and will be held at the Tri Delta House.

All members of the Engineering Club are requested to meet in front of McClure Hall, Friday, at 4 P. M., to have picture taken for the Oregana. The Electrical Engineers will have their picture taken at the same time at the same place.

LOST—A slide rule in a leather case. A suitable reward for its return to Sanford Adler, Tawah Club.

LOST—Round gold pin, between Dearly Hall and Library. Finder please leave with registrar.

Have you paid that dollar to the Emerald? Do it now.
