Tickets for the Junior Prom at Stanford this year will cost five dollars. To insure against overcrowding, the number will be limited to 125. Following the old custom at the southern institution, it has been requested that there be neither flowers nor carriages.

The Oregon Club, composed of graduates of Oregon High Schools at the University of Washington, will make an active campaign in an attempt to get Oregon students to attend the University of Washington. The club is composed of sixty-two members, with Bernard Noble of Oregon City president.

In a straw vote at Dartmouth last week, Taft was first with 181 votes. Roosevelt second with 171, Wilson third with 124, Harmon fourth, 24; Clark fifth with 17; and La Follette sixth with seven votes.

Alpha Rho chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta, was recently installed at the University of South Dakota.

Mrs. Henrietta Owen Mansfield, '96, has made a success of advertising work, being now advertising manager for a large Oakland, Cal., business house.

James Hunter Wells, one of the seven men to graduate in the first class of medicine in the University, 1888, is now medical missionary to Korea.

Laurids Laurison is in the employ of the Pacific Power and Light Company, Portland, as an electrical engineer.

Emily Pohn, '93, is one of the few women who have held the responsible position of city physician in Portland.

MYSTIC RITES TO BIND
VARSITY LILIPUTIANS

A Jeffs Club, which bears the earmarks of a national organization, and which was founded at the University of Washington during the Christmas holidays, may be installed at the University of Oregon.

The Jeffs Club is an interfraternity affair and boasts a pin, ritual, and all the modern paraphernalia of a fraternal organization. The pin is a shield with sword and torch crossed and "favas" surmounting them.

In order to be eligible for membership a man must be less than five feet six inches tall. One of the local fraternities has received full particulars, with instructions covering the admission of a chapter of this abbreviated men's society at the University of Oregon.

An effort is being made by the parent chapter at Washington to install chapters in universities and colleges in both the Western and Eastern part of the country.

ENGINEERING CLUB GIVES INTERESTING PROGRAM

The Engineering Club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening in Deady Hall.

An interesting program consisting of two talks was given. Lyman Rice spoke of the history, construction, and maintenance of railroads, outlining briefly each phase of his subject. Following, Prof. O. F. Stafford spoke of the field for chemical engineers. He discussed the needs of chemical engineers in the varied industries, and pointed out specific cases where there is need for such professional men.

The next meeting of the club will be held in two weeks, April 2, when Graham Michael will speak of gold dredging in Alaska.
