COLLEGE WOMEN TAKE STEPS TO AID VOTERS

Form Progressive-Democratic Oregon Club to Study the Social Problems of State.

"By the organization of what might well be called the Progressive-Democratic Club of the University," as Professor F. G. Young explained to his class in Sociology this morning, "an important step can be taken by the women of the University toward vindicating the institution in a broad way by ascertaining what possibilities are open to the University women for studying the social conditions of the state that are in need of tuning up."

With the extension of suffrage in this state, the opportunity is open, Professor Young further explained, for the assumption of leadership by the college trained portion of the new electorate in the guidance of their own sex in politics and affairs of state.

To accomplish this, it was suggested that, through the efforts of the women, Miss Jane Adams, of the Hull House Settlement of Chicago, be secured to speak to the women of the University. Recognizing her as one of the authorities on sociological work, especially for women, Professor Young thought that her advice would be valuable upon the advent of suffrage in this state.

Immediate steps along this line may be taken, as several of the women in the class expressed a desire to engage in the work. Miss Carin Degermark conferred with Professor Young this afternoon in regard to further developments of the suggestion.

PRESS CLUB PLANS SOCIAL AND BUSINESS MEETINGS

Lee Hendricks, president of the Press Club, said in regard to future meetings of the club: "We meet next Wednesday at 5 o'clock in Professor Allen's room. After this there will be two meetings of the club held every month. One of these will be a business meeting, while the other will be a banquet. Our next meeting is a general business meeting."

OREGON CO-ED STARTS HIGH SCHOOL ACTING

"Preppers" Almost as Good as College Players, Says Coach Janet Young.

A dramatic club, under the supervision of Janet Young has been organized in the Eugene High School. Last Tuesday a tryout was held, in which forty contestants took part. The tryout was entirely extemporaneous, each contestant reading either a part of the "Merchant of Venice," or a selection from James Whitcomb Riley. Janet Young, Norma Dobie, and Francis Curtis acted as judges.

Of those competing for membership, seven girls and four boys were chosen as regular members and three of each sex for officiate members. As the personnel of the club is limited to seven of each for regular members and three of each for officiate members, the only vacancies now remaining are for three boys on the regular list.

The judges report that the tryout compared favorably with that held earlier at the University, and that the girls were particularly good. The organization will soon be completed and plans are already on foot for a play to be given after the next high school assembly hour.

O. A. C. NEGOTIATIONS FAIL; GEARY PLANS

for four years following, in Portland, but finally consented to the three year proposal of Mr. Geary, providing the game next year should be played on Thanksgiving Day. Geary said that was up to the Multnomah Club, because the University had a previous contract with the Club for a game on that day with the M. A. A. C. team.

Supt. Walker, of the Multnomah Club, then called a meeting of the trustees of the Club, to consider the proposition of relinquishing the University from the contract to play the Club on Thanksgiving Day of next year. But, after consideration, the trustees decided that the responsibility of the settlement of the difficulty between the two schools should not be placed upon the Multnomah Club, and that for various reasons, they should not give up the date for the settlement of the difficulty. Among their reasons were; that the game between M. A. A. C. and U. of O. has been a permanent institution for nearly twenty years, and to give it up would be to destroy a sacred tradition; that it would entail a loss of prestige for the Multnomah games; and that the difficulty could be solved by the schools without such sacrifice on the part of Multnomah Club.

An O. A. C. alumnus, prominent with the Multnomah Club, gave vent to an opinion that has vital bearing on Oregon's position in the attempt to adjust the differences between the two schools. He says: "I have previously thought that the University of Oregon was mainly to blame for the failure of the two schools to come to terms, but I am now convinced that the Oregon Agricultural College is at fault."

defeated Washington for the first time since 1907?

Last Saturday the Oregon Agriculture College almost wrested the palm from Gilmour Dobie, coach, captain and commander of the University of Washington. Things looked bad for Dobie for a while. He is not used to defeat, in fact he does not know what it is. Eight years of unbroken victories have spoiled the Gem State Leader.

Players Hope for Even Break.
Coach Pinkham, Captain Walker, and Quarterback Cornell saw the game Saturday. All agree that Washington will play fifty per cent better on a dry field and upon their native sod, but nevertheless, they think that Oregon will have an even break. One thing is certain, that Dobie will have to break the Third Commandment to win.

Assembly—Regular student assembly tomorrow morning. Miss Christine I. Tingling, of Norfolk, Virginia, will speak.

Wanted—A student to work for his board. Apply at the Book Exchange.
