TRUTH FROM THE SOURCE

Mr. Hanley hit the nail on the head in his address yesterday morning, when he warned us against the tendency of college men and women to specialize to the point of narrowness. We must bow in admiration before in the broad sense, is the one who maintains a wide, tolerant, generous view point toward life and the world.

This principle of broadness of vision does not apply merely to ability to gather the dollars and cents; it applies to our attitude toward mankind in general. We now and then find a student who during his four years of college life, has seemed to forget the great extent of the world and to think that the only part of creation of any importance is his own little sphere of acquaintance and activity. This is the worst kind of narrowness

Preston & Hales organizations?

I suppose, that like other organizations with nebulous ambitions, they have for their supreme object, etc., good fellowship and friendship among themselves as students of one class. Yet in the face of this they base their hope of creating their longed for good fellowship and so on, on the frailty of superficial action and manners evidenced at these formal dinners.

To-Ko-Lo does not seem to realize that as young men, they can become much better friends, and understand each other much better, and thus give the correct basis for good friendship, if they undertake a frank discussion, find out their different opinions and try to reach some sensible conclusion about any of the problems that confront us all as students in this University. Let usefulness be their ambition.

But to continue this sham and nonsense of giving formal dinners on a week night, without any other outward excuse for their existence, will mean the end of such foolishness as secret Sophomore societies.
