SUMMER SCHOOL PLANS AT LAST RESUSCITATED

Courses of Especial Interest Are Prepared for the Session of 1913.

The University of Oregon Summer School which opens June 23rd and closes August 1st, promises to be an unusually interesting session this year. The University Summer School has established itself as a permanent and important feature in college life. The Student Body is of a somewhat different nature than during the winter session, inasmuch as teachers, working people and those who are unable to come to school at any time seize this opportunity to improve their minds. It affords a pleasant vacation in addition as there are few classes in the afternoon and this time is open to "hikes" over the hills around Eugene, picnics up the race and drives along the river.

Many of the regular Faculty remain at their station. In addition the services of many prominent men, and instructors have been secured not only from the state but in the East and abroad as well. Dr. F. H. Hayward, Schoolinspector of London, will deliver five lectures on selected topics. Professor C. F. Hodge, of Clark University, a prominent student and authority on Nature Study, will give a course in Civic Biology. Professor J. W. Glover, of the University of Michigan, will deal with civic problems. Dr. George Rebec, a popular instructor in the University of Oregon, will give courses in Philosophy of Education and Pedagogical Psychology. Dr. Joseph Schafer will carry on a course in the History and Civil Government of Oregon. Special lectures will be given by Mrs. Florence Kelly, of Boston, Secretary of the National Consumers' League, Miss Luna E. Bigelow, who is sent out by the Bureau of Roads U. S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. John H. Boyd, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Portland, Oregon, who will conduct conferences on the subject of church efficiency. There are also other lectures being planned, but definite data cannot be furnished on them at this time.

Special courses for teachers will be arranged in Mathematics, History, Physics, Biology, Chemistry, French, German, Latin, English, Journalism, Physical Education, and other branches.

Professor Stockton Axson, head of the department of English literature at Princeton, will be here the entire session and will give one of his great lectures each day. Professor Axson is a brother-in-law of President Woodrow Wilson.

DRAMATIC CLUB WINS AUDIENCE

Whenever Miss Prism lopped over a piece of furniture or a convenient shoulder, and made one of her awful faces, the audience was convulsed.

Bert Jerard was howling, as the Rev. Canon Chasuble, D. D., the country pastor. His make-up was enough to lend hilarity to any production and his acting, though a caricature, was consistent, and he was in the thick of the fray all the time.

The reverend gentleman's scenes with Miss Prism were about the funniest in the whole play. Together they exhibited some of the most laughable stunts, especially in the grand finale, when a touching reconciliation occurred between them.

The part of Mary, the maid, played by Hazel Barta, and the maid servant, by Janet Young, who usually assumes the leading role in the college plays, were perfectly done.

The atmosphere of the whole play was a screaming burlesque on the matrimonial views and trials of English society. The humorous entanglements and knotty situations, interspersed with numerous proposals and ridiculous poses, made a tremendous hit, which culminated in a prolonged applause at the very end, when each performer was rightfully restored to his own in loving embrace.
