thority on Western History in the United States.

Prof. Frederick J. Turner of Harvard University has accepted the joint invitation of the University of Oregon and the University of Washington to lecture at the summer schools of the two universities next summer.

Professor Turner, for many years head of the history department of the University of Wisconsin before going to Harvard in 1910, was an instructor of both Dr. Joseph Schafer of the University of Oregon and Prof. Edward S. Meany of the University of Washington. Through Dr. Schafer, who suggested that the invitation be sent to Prof. Turner, and Professor Meany, who responded heartily to the plan, Prof. Turner was secured to deliver his nationally known lectures to the summer school classes.

Is Authority on History.

Dr. Schafer regards Prof. Turner as the greatest historian in America as an interpreter of American history and considers his essay, "The Significance of the Frontier in American History," first published in 1893, as the path-breaker toward the new conception of American history in regard to the influence of the frontier in molding and changing the national character and life. Through Prof. Turner's patient work a large collection of material pertaining to the frontier has been added to the collection of the Wisconsin Historical Society.

Professor Turner was president of the American Historical Association in 1910, when he delivered an address on "The Social Forces in American History," in which he showed the part played by the early western formative period in shaping the whole national character, as opposed to the Plymouth Rock view.

Good Lectures Promised.

Professor Turner's lectures during the summer school at U. of O. next year will be on "Phases of Western Influence in American History."

Students in Dr. Schafer's classes where the history of the western part of the United States is touched upon are familiar with Professor Turner's Branches.

A complete list of the practice teachers for this semester has just been issued for publication by Professor F. C. Ayer, Dean of the educational department. He says:

"The class in practice teaching at the University is now composed of 27 members and as a group is undoubtedly the best that has ever undertaken the work of teaching in the Eugene schools. All of the class have specialized in the particular field of work being taught, while many have already had teaching experience but are taking the work to obtain the supervision of the department and come in direct contact with a first class school system. With the addition of Mr. Stetson to the supervisory department the University is much better prepared this year to administer the teaching. The work is in general charge of Professor Ayer; immediate supervision is being given by Mr. Stetson, Miss Hastings, Dr. Stuart, Miss Sullivan and the various members of the school faculties. In addition to this the various departments of the University co-operate with their respective students. An equal number of teachers will take up the work the next semester.

The detailed list of the 27 teachers with the subject taught and the school where teaching, is as follows:

Flora Avery, Music, Geary.
Sybil Brown, English, Patterson.
Effie Cole, German, Lincoln.
J. Crenshaw, Physics, Eugene High.
Claire Deyoe, Physical Geography, Eugene High.
Norma Dobie, English, Eugene High.
Flora Dunham, History, Eugene High.
Agnes Elliott, Geography, Patterson.
Meta Goldsmith, German, Springfield High.

works, as they are widely used as reference texts.
