TAKING THE PLEDGE.

Standing in assembly one year ago, the students of Oregon swore to keep the pledge submitted by Governor West to do all in their power to discharge their obligations to the state for the advantages offered them in the way of higher education and consequent possibilities opened up to them for advancement in after life. Tomorrow at ten o'clock those who took this oath last fall will renew their acknowledgement of the debt incurred by them, and the new students in the University will be given their first chance to subscribe to the provisions of the pledge.

In the brief space of a twelvemonth the students' pledge has become one of the most important traditions in college life. Although it may be safely assumed that previous to the introduction of the custom, a large majority of those attending classes at the state University were fully cognizant of the debt placed upon them by the taxpayers of the state in making possible the exist- 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 ence of an institution of higher o learning, it is no less certain that o nothing could be more effective in o fixing this obligation in the minds o of the undergraduates than a verbal o acknowledgement.

But it must not stop with this. The students of the University are fitted while here, to become leaders in the commonwealth in after years The training they have received and are receiving fits them to be foremost in movements for the practical o betterment of conditions in Oregon.

A new state with vast resources, as yet hardly touched, offers infinite o possibilities. Within the next fifty o years, Oregon may be made or marred. No greater opportunity o could be given, than is offered to the men and women of the University o to show that the confidence placed o in them has not been misplaced and o that the benefits heaped upon them o by the people of Oregon have not o been wasted. The students must not o and will not fail to recognize this.

NO W. S. C. GAME.

Due to an error in the last issue o of the Emerald, a game was an- o nounced as scheduled with W. S. C. o at Pullman on November 1. For o the benefit of local fans it is stated o that there is no game listed on the o conference slate, between Oregon o and the Washington Aggles.

BY DEATH OF MOTHER

Will Not Return to College This Semester. Out of Football

Floyd Ross, '17, who would probably have been the next man placed on the football training table, was suddenly called to his home in Wenatchee, Wash., by the death of his mother, from heart failure.

A telegram Sunday informed him that she was near death, and another Monday brought the news of her death Sunday night. She had suffered from heart trouble for several years, but had not been in a serious condition prior to the last attack during the past week.

When he left Ross said he did not expect to return to college before the beginning of the second semesway while in college, almost entire- 200. ly; and besides has been out for football practice every night since the season began.
