

FRESHMAN SAVES TO MAKE PORTLAND TRIP

Spends Only Two Cents on Meals. Writes Jauntily of Methods

John Doe, the newest member of The Daily staff, is saving his money for the trip to Portland. Following the advice of science, he has started out to live on 50 cents a week. From day to day he will chronicle the way he managed to scrape through the day without spending any money.

By John Doe, '17.
Man can live on 5 cents a week. I am going to make that Portland trip if I have to be shipped as a skeleton.

No musical student of Kansas can lead where I can't follow. My allowance for internal sustenance is 19 bucks per month and I eat every meal; it means three bowls a day. When the month is dead I have gone the limit. Wednesday I knew I couldn't afford to burden the G. N. with my frame for that Rose City joyride. But now I can negotiate the distance and wear a rooster's hat. It's a cinch; beat any pipe dream ever smoked. When Thursday's Daily announced that a K. U. student had lived on 50 cents a week, I took stock and retrenched:

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley says: "Two cents worth of whole wheat ground in an ordinary coffee grinder and cooked in a double boiler will furnish sufficient nourishment for one meal for a family of six." By algebra and geometry I deduced that John Doe, alias Yours Truly, sleeping till his 8 o'clock and thus missing breakfast, could live on said two grains, or rather cents worth of undressed wheat for three days. Students in higher mathematics can see that it totals 5 cents a week.

It's a sure thing. I started yesterday. Quit my establishment of blissful parboiled food and drew a check for 5 cents. Fact is when that little club was cooked it looked as though it would last a lifetime, but I saw my duty and did it nobly. I partitioned it into fourteen messes and last night devoured one. I'm alive. Now I don't necessarily intend to be a miser. I can still extract a few cents a week and have a Portland fund. Anything edible I see and can grasp I will devour.

Also I am trusting in fate. Ouija is my patron. Anyway most girls believe in it. Science, save Dr. Wiley, be hanged. Unladylike, but expressive. Ouija advised me to go to the gym yesterday morning. I did. Irreligious men were scrubbing the floor; aftermath of a dance the previous night. I entered; looked around a bit; departed. When I reached home I had a bag of marshmallows; left over from the marshmallow race. That was my Sunday dinner. The coating of the "marshs" I scraped over my piece de resistance—whole wheat—as an icing. I lunched on the w. w.

I weigh 165.
But, hist, a friend approaches, and methinks I odorize a meal. Ouija, guard me!—Washington Daily.
