Eugene Brookings Praises the Work of John C. Veatch—Larger Vote Would Have Increased Majority, He Says

Holding that the result of the referendum election Tuesday settles conclusively the position of the University of Oregon, the Oregon Citizens' Educational League, which bore the chief burden of the campaign to save the appropriations, will go further in its activities in behalf of the state institution, and plans are to be formulated at once looking to the raising of an endowment of $1,000,000 from individual contributions.

Eugene Brookings, president of the league and one of the most active workers in the campaign, made this announcement yesterday.

Plan Starts at Once.

"The league will begin plans immediately to raise the endowment fund of $1,000,000 and will continue at all times to lend its aid in every possible way to the support, not only of the State University but of the other educational institutions of the state," he said.

"So far as its appropriations are concerned, the University is saved. Tuesday's victory was complete, and it is safe to say that had the vote been larger it would have increased only the size of the majority in favor of the university. The people of Oregon want our university maintained at Eugene. To use the referendum against the institution again would be only to hamper it temporarily in its progress and to waste the resources of the state in useless elections.

Varsity to go Ahead.

"The university can now go forward. Its attendance will increase and the new buildings will relieve the crowded conditions and make room for more."

Mr. Brookings expressed the gratitude of the league for the assistance given in the campaign by the press, women's clubs, labor, fraternal and commercial organizations. To J. C. Veatch he also gave great credit for his activity in the campaign, saying that he had been one of the most faithful and hardest workers at all times, and attributing the success of the campaign largely to his efforts.

You know that old suit doesn't look as good as it might. Let Howe Bros. measure you for a new one. Sophomores, how about that dress suit you ought to have? Royal tailored ones are the best—always.

We Don't Know How ---

To write ads but we DO know how to buy shoes and we are professional shoe fitters, having the widths and sizes to enable us to fit feet properly.

We buy in large quantities for cash and obtain the best prices to be had.

And too, we prefer to have several small profits than to have one large one.

If you will come in we can demonstrate our ability and the quality of our shoes much better than we can convey them to you in an advertisement.
