RARE OLD BOOKS ARE IN LIBRARY

WORM EATEN VOLUMES OF GREEK, LATIN, SPANISH,
DATE BACK TO 1547

COLLECTION IS VALUABLE

Relics of Interest of Civil War
Times Are Strip of Confederate
Flag, Note, and Newspaper

Hidden in an almost unknown part of the University Library are twenty Latin and Greek books with dates ranging between the fifteenth to the sixteenth centuries; a small strip of the flag which floated over the Confederate Capitol at Richmond during the Civil War; a newspaper printed at Vicksburg just before its capture by the Union army; a Confederate bank note, and a gavel made from a pear tree planted by Abraham Lincoln. The collection is kept in an interior room at the northern end of the Library proper.

The books, written in Latin and Greek, and in one case in both languages, are bound in heavy leather. Although some of the volumes are worm eaten, they are still in a good state of preservation. Among them is a book on physics by Aristotle, translated from the Greek into Latin and published in 1549. A Greek book, printed in 1547, was presented to the Library by Henry M. Thorsen in 1890.

The small strip of white muslin which was a part of the flag which swung from the masthead over the Civil War, still shows the effects of the war. It bears marks caused by the smoke which enveloped the city when it was besieged by the Union army. On the back of the card to which the bit of muslin is attached is an explanatory note written by the late Colonel A. B. Lawrence, of Warsaw, New York, who in 1910 presented to the Library the memento at the request of his comrade, Rev. Henry Lathrop. Colonel Lawrence was Chief Quartermaster of the Fourth Army Corps at the time Richmond was besieged. The note is as follows: "The attached piece of bunting is a part of the Confederate flag that floated over the Confederate Capitol in Richmond, Virginia, was captured with the city in April, 1865, and replaced by our 'Old Glory,' U. S. flag. The captured C. S. A. flag was spread out for exhibition in the C. S. Senate chamber. Upon some insulting protests by a Confederate brigadier about the flag, Major-General M. R. Patrick—U. S. Provost Marshal—authorized me to cut up the flag for mementos of a sacrifice of 400,000 loyal lives.

"A. B. LAWRENCE,
"Warsaw, N. Y., June 1, 1910."
The newspaper, "The Daily Citizen," was published during the siege of Vicksburg. The news is printed on the back of a piece of green wallpaper and bears the date July 2, 1863. It is clear and well-printed. The sheet is full of news about the war and down in one corner is a notice, written after the fall of the city, telling of Grant's victory. The editor was H. M. Swords.

Another interesting article is a $10 Confederate banknote, issued April 17, 1863, numbered 80,157. It was included among those distributed by Chief Quartermaster Lawrence to the Union soldiers after the siege of Richmond.

The gavel was made from a pear tree planted by Lincoln and which was cut down after his death in 1865. It is not known whether it was ever used by the martyred President or not.

Through a regretted mistake, the name of Prof. F. G. Frink was omitted from the Faculty Directory. It should stand Prof. F. G. Frink, Professor of Mathematics and Engineering in Correspondence and Extension Departments; 907 Hillyard street, phone 575-J.

GRADS WANT CAMPUS GAMES

pense or inconvenience, but I believe we owe it to our university to advocate that this game be taken back to Eugene where it properly and normally belongs." The other men thought the same and placed themselves on record accordingly. All of which illustrates that it is not because they love themselves the less but because they love their university the more.

A campus game gives all of the student body free entrance under the present season ticket plan, whereas now many are prevented from seeing the Portland and Albany contests because they can not afford it or, as in case with many of the university women, because their parents do not wish for them to take such trips unless they are chaperoned. The townspeople of Eugene, who made great sacrifices to give the university a start in the very first place and who have helped steer it through many a referendum fight since then, are also entitled to consideration in this connection. The university does owe a debt of gratitude to its friends, in Albany and to those who have helped make the Albany games successes, but the obligation at Eugene is larger immeasurably. Then again, a game on Kincaid will do more than anything else could do to get the old grads back on the campus, thus bringing the graduates closer to the university and closer to their fellow graduates in intimate connection with their undergraduate associations. That is worth something.

Some may think that campus games between the university and the agricultural college would precipitate student quarrels not unknown to the past, but surely the one good permanent lesson that has been learned will act effectively to checkmate any possible recurrence of unpleasantness. In recent years the rival student bodies have shown unmistakably that they are sensible and honorable enough to meet without "scrapping" and the test of a campus game would probably prove that the two partisan factions are strictly on their guard against another such mistake. Perhaps courtesy and decorum of even Alphonso and Gaston ritual would rule supreme. Anyhow, if the students of these two institutions are not competent of reasonable behavior on their home campus surroundings, why should they be spoiled to the extent of setting up an artificial surrounding? So far as that is concerned, squabbles can be pulled off anywhere, and if they are to come in the end, they will come at Albany and Portland just as they might at Eugene and Corvallis.

It seems that all of the alumni regard Hugo Bezdek as the right man in the right place. They believe, not only that he has developed the possibilities of the football men to the full and made the team absolutely a front ranker, but that he has been doing a more permanent, if not more important, work by nourishing the athletes, and the men and women of the university as well, with a very wholesome brand of collegiate psychology, that he has been rebuilding a wonderful spirit, one that may be interrupted once in a while but which, in the end, will never be downed or humbled. They believe that the return of vital games to the Eugene campus would fortify his efforts in this direction and give him a better prospect of early supremacy. So far as the writer has been able to determine in a general way, the Oregon alumni like Hugo Bezdek and are very proud of Bezdek's 1913 team.

The expressions in this communication are given by me with absolutely no authority from any one, but at the same time, the writer believes that they are approximately accurate and he feels secure that he has represented unofficially the opinion of the Portland alumni, or at least those who were loyal enough to turn out for the jolly-up meeting just prior to the Washington game.

Always very faithfully yours,

CHESTER A. MOORES, '12.
