Sketch for Oregana of Unique Design. Subscription List Begins to Increase

Editor Lee Hendricks, of the 1915 Oregana, has been exhibiting a water color drawing submitted to him for the Fraternity heading of the 1915 book, which has excited comment, partly on account of the excellence of the work, but mostly on account of the originality. For obvious reasons the subject will not be revealed through the columns of the Emerald, which reaches quite a number of other colleges whose editors are seeking something out of the beaten track. It is sufficient to say, however, that skulls, pipes, cigarettes, and girls are conspicuous for their absence. T. Tominaga, of the 1914 class, is the artist responsible for the sketch.

Manager Dorris reports a satisfactory increase in Oregana subscriptions. He says: "The students seem to believe at last that the 1915 book will be worth while, and the subscriptions are beginning to pile in. The only reason I know of that an Oregon student should not subscribe for a copy is because of lack of money. In this connection, if anyone is temporarily broke but wishes to take advantage of the two dollar and a half rate, will hand in their name and agree to pay the dollar and a half by February first, I will be glad to accommodate them."

The Junior Class has taken a sudden spurt and over fifty per cent of them have now subscribed."

"IT'S UP TO US," SAYS DR.
HODGE IN Y. M. LECTURE

What Future Generations Will Be Depends Upon Lives We Lead

"We have to do with the future. It is up to us as to what the future generations will be." So said Dr. C. F. Hodge in his talk at the Y. M. C. A. meeting last night in Deady Hall. He gave a brief review of the biological work at the Clark University and showed how it affects the lives of young men. "The modern biological question governs all religious and scientific motives," was his statement. "It gives out the truth and the truth will set a life free. Murder by poison, the knife or the bullet is not so loathsome as the diseases of the red plague. Think it over. The college is the strategic point. All the bad life of it sifts down to the high schools and there is the reason for all the trouble. Let us clean up and the result is inevitable. A whole university may get a name and reputation on the outside by one bad man."

President Campbell and Dr. Schafer also spoke, emphasizing Dr. Hodge's points.

PROF. ERIC ALLEN IS ON WAY HOME FROM EAST

Instructor Has Been Visiting and Inspecting Schools of Journalism

Eric W. Allen, professor of Journalism in the University of Oregon, who has been on a tour of study and inspection of several schools of Journalism in the east, left Columbia, Missouri, where he visited the Journalism department of the University of Missouri, last Saturday.

Prof. Allen is now on his way home, traveling by way of El Paso and Los Angeles. He will probably arrive in Eugene the first part of next week.

The University of Chicago Glee Club may make a Western tour this year.
