EVERYBODY OUT

The hour is at hand. The opportunity for which we have all been waiting knocks at the door. To eschew all euphuistic teratology, the first pajama pee-rade of the year will positively take place tomorrow evening.

Speaking conservatively, we estimate that every Oregon rooter has stored up in his system 11,111 ergs of surplus energy. Now, you aforesaid rooters, who have been bursting with the aforesaid energy, who have been bemoaning the decay of Oregon spirit, who have been clamoring for a chance to clamor—now, we repeat, you are about to come into your own.

All of which is another and a nutty way of saying that every Oregon man is expected, urged and implored to get into tomorrow night's parade, and also into his pajamas, or perhaps we should have reversed the order. Anyway, the idea is to be in line, with something airy and fanciful in evening attire. It doesn't necessarily have to be the costume we have suggested. Clothes don't make the man—especially not in a rooters' parade. We understand, however, that prizes are offered for the most striking toilettes.

We must give the old town the shock of her life! And we must bring that old Oregon spirit to life and full health once more!

Remember, the greatest pajama parade in history starts tomorrow evening at 7:15. If you have clothes, prepare to shed them now.

WHO'S WHO

Today the Emerald introduces another innovation—a "Who's Who" column. Aren't we just full of tricks? Anyway, we have a lot of old cuts from last year's Oregoniana lying around the office, and we thought we would put them to work.

For our idea we are deeply indebted to our esteemed evening contemporary, the Saturday Evening Post. Of course, our articles won't be as long as theirs; not that our local celebrities furnish less material for discussion, but our space is limited. We do not intend to print this column in every issue, but just often enough to remind our readers that there are men and women on the campus who are doing something for the University besides attending their classes, and that they should have recognition.

No fear or favoritism will be shown, and we will try to hit most of the leading characters with our spotlight during the year. The management wanted us to write up only students who have paid their Emerald subscriptions, but we replied that there wouldn't be enough to suit our purpose. If you happen to become a subject for our voracious biographer, please do not be offended if he takes a few liberties with the facts. And if we don't get around to you, do not feel neglected—probably we haven't any cuts of you on hand.

Seriously, we believe all of us should know more about our fellow students who are doing things on the campus. We suggest that the various articles could be clipped from time to time and put in a scrap-book that would be both novel and interesting.

WILL THEY BACK US UP?

The Student Council last night recommended that a campaign be made to close all the business houses in Eugene during the game with Whitman Saturday. Accordingly, today and tomorrow a student committee will call on the various firms in the city with the request that they declare a holiday between the hours of 2:00 and 5:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon, so that there will be but one all-absorbing event at that time—the big game.

We hope and believe that the business men will see it our way. They generally do the right thing when the University is concerned, and we feel that this is the right thing. Whitman is the only conference team which will play here this season. It takes money to finance athletic teams, and Portland has proved the only city in which crowds may be drawn sufficient to pay for the big games.

The citizens of Eugene want these games brought back to the campus—and so do the students. But this can be done only when Eugene demonstrates that it can furnish its share of the gate money. Therefore every good crowd at a local game hastens the day when we can entertain Washington and O. A. C. right in our own yard.

Besides, it would partly spoil the afternoon for us to know when Bezdek's warriors trot out on the field, that some fan, imprisoned in store or office, would give his next pay envelope for a perch on the bleachers and a chance to cheer that team.

Let's concentrate on football Saturday.

YELL PRACTICE

Yell practice will be held on Kincaid Field Thursday and Friday evenings from 4:00 to 4:30. This is to give the new yell leader opportunity to organize his forces and to let the rooters see Bezdek's men in action. Everybody out.

Tommy Boylen

WHO'S WHO AT OREGON?

No. 1.

TOM BOYLEN

In beginning a series of sketches on "Who's Who at Oregon," lest we be charged with wanton plagiarism, we wish to first express appreciation of our esteemed contemporary, "Who's Who," whose example has been most inspiring as well as uplifting.

In beginning a series of sketches, as we said before, such as we are contemplating, it would seem decidedly out of place if we didn't concentrate our first attack on the man who made Pendleton "let 'er buck, have another" famous—none other than the golden-haired director of student affairs—Tom Boylen.

It was a boilin' hot day in July, 1892, when the whole country was celebrating the anniversary of our national independence, that the news was spread broadcast that the population of Pendleton had been increased by the arrival of a Boy(len). Young Boylen's namesake was, fittingly, Tom Jefferson framer of the Declaration of Independence, who said something about all men being created free and equal.

Tom's (he wasn't called Tommy until he came to Eugene) early career was uneventful. Athletically, he inclined toward track, although his formal debut as a cinder path artist didn't occur until he got his "spike" from the Kappa Sigma boys.

Under the paternal guidance of Bill Hayward, Tommy began his course in athletics at Oregon. When the count of "O's" was made last year, Tom was included with the letter men in track and basketball. He also took a "shot" at soccer, but his modest suit of red was such a strong attraction that during the Multnomah game last fall some aspiring clubman "socked" him in the eye. Dr. Bill prescribed green goggles.

Tommy's recent history is of such general knowledge that we forbear from mentioning it.
