

SENIORS PLAN THESE

Topics Will be for the Reorganization of Municipal, State and County Government

The Seniors of the Department of Economics will write as their theses plans for the reorganization of the municipal, county and state governments of Oregon, with a view to an increased efficiency and economy. Professor Young says, "There is, throughout the country, a strong feeling for drastic action eliminating commissions and superfluous offices, cutting down expenditures and lowering tax levies. There is a grave danger, however, that this craze for retrenchment will impair the efficiency of the administrations. Some states have felt the need of plans for a more effective organization. Commissions have been appointed and are devising plans for greater efficiency and economy. There is no such commission in Oregon, but the public has shown a strong disposition to act on the matter, and as a result of this the Seniors of the Economics Department have volunteered to formulate various schemes which may be submitted to the proper committees at the next session of the legislature."

The research work in this department involves a new feature of field work and actual surveys made by the individual of the local and state government, instead of a study of statistics and reports. University Senior scholarship funds are expected to be received for the expenses of the students while making practical studies in the committee rooms of the State Legislature.

While not all the class have decided on the titles of their theses, the following subjects have been handed in: "Unemployment Legislation and Institutions for Oregon," James T. Donald; "The Peace Problem of Europe," P. C. Crockett; "Factors of the Successful Occupation of Land in Different Sections of Oregon," Walter R. Dimm; "Cost Units in Potato Raising in the Potato Producing Regions of the World," Roy Johnson; "A Budget System for Oregon," Millar McGilchrist; "Oregon Trade With Latin America," T. W. Staiger.

The excavating of the conduit for the new heating system is now nearly completed, and the carpenters are at work on the forms for the concrete. When finished, the conduit will be large enough for a man to walk through. For the present, only the Men's Gymnasium and President Campbell's residence will be heated by pipes from the conduit. When the new Administration building is ready it will also be connected with the conduit, and eventually all the buildings of the University will be heated by steam through the conduit. A new boiler is to be installed in the heating plant. The contract price of the new system, including that of the new Administration building, is $22,000.00.
