

H. B. MILLER ADDRESSES COMMERCE CLASS

Subject is "The Human Side of Development." Master Your Subject His Principle of Success

"The West ought to have the best civilization, because of the mingling of the blood of all nations." This is what Hon. H. B. Miller, of Portland, Director of the School of Commerce at the University, told the Industry and Commerce class Thursday afternoon, in Villard Hall. His subject was "The Human Side of Development."

"Diversified industry is essential to the best civilization," he went on to say, "and diversified industry is brought about by the diversity of blood relationship. Nearly every state of the Union and every nation of the world is represented on the Pacific Coast."

Mr. Miller said that the vast industries of Belfast, Ireland, including ship building, the weaving of linen, the cigar and tobacco manufacturing, and the making of rope, are not due to natural advantages; for the coal, iron, and even foodstuffs for the workers of the ship building factories, the flax for the linen mills, the tobacco for the cigar factories, and the hemp for the rope, must all be imported from England, the United States and other parts of the world. But they are due to the human skill, the knowledge, and the ability manifested by the Irish, and to the fact that they are tremendously industrious. He also said: "These characteristics have been developed by the mingling of the races of Scotland, England, and almost every part of Europe."

One statement in particular which he made to the class was this: "One of the fundamental principles of success is, 'Master your subject in every detail.'"

The finance campaign of the Young Women's Christian Association has begun in earnest, according to Miss Mary Gillies. The various captains and teams have started their work of collecting subscriptions.

"Everyone must be prepared to give money," said Miss Gillies. "Several town and faculty women have already been taxed, and they will not be asked for more. But we will tackle everyone who has not given any as yet, so the easiest way is to pay something now."

GLEE CLUB TO GIVE OPERA JUNIOR WEEK-END

Social Affairs Committee Grants Date Which Usually Was Observed by Other Clubs

The Student Social Affairs Committee granted Friday of Junior Week-End to the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs for their comic opera. Instead of the usual Dramatic Club or Senior Class play, a comic opera produced by college students will be the feature of entertainment for the out-of-town guests. The principals, as well as the chorus, will be chosen from the two clubs, and no professional singers will be introduced.

Mr. Lyman says: "We have not yet chosen the opera, but it will be a good one. A great deal of interest has been shown in this new undertaking, and I feel it will be a great success."

PORTLAND EDITOR VISITS JOURNALISM DEPARTMENT

George M. Cornwall, of Portland, editor of the Timberman, paid a brief visit to the Journalism Department yesterday, in the course of which he delivered to the Freshman class an address of a few minutes, on the means of making ideas marketable.

Mr. Cornwall promised to return at some future time and tell the students at greater length "how to publish a timber magazine," and to relate some of his experiences. He says he is the only editor in the business who ever traded an obituary notice for a baby's high chair, as he did once in his younger days.

Besides being the publisher of the lumbermen's trade paper, Mr. Cornwall takes part in various public activities. Among other positions, he holds office as a regent of the Oregon Agricultural College.

Nat C. Goodwin in "Never Say Die"

Among the early attractions at the Eugene Theatre is one of the real old favorites of local theatre-goers, Mr. Nat Goodwin, accompanied by the present Mrs. Goodwin, formerly Margaret Moreland, as his leading lady. This is the radiantly beautiful California girl for whom he risked his life about two years ago, thereby meeting with an accident that threatened his very existence for over a year, and that he is again restored to perfect health, with all his powers and genius, cannot but be a source of extreme gratification among his friends that he numbers by the thousands.

He will be seen in the roaring farcical comedy, "Never Say Die," by Wm. H. Post. October 17, Eugene Theatre.
