

OREGON AND U. OF W. COMPARED MAN TO MAN

DOBIETES HAVE ADVANTAGE IN EXPERIENCE AND WEIGHT

"BEZ" CAN SHOW FIGHT

Dopester Thinks Oregon Has It Over Washingtonians in Everything Except End Positions

By Rex Kay.

Washington was an unknown factor until they clashed with O. A. C. last Saturday at Albany. As a whole, the showing made by the Dobiemen was a disappointment to the Washington followers. The fight and aggressiveness which has marked all Washington teams in the past was lacking.

Just before the game Captain Shiel said: "I don't know how we will come out. We aren't going the way we used to."

"It is hard to say how we are going to finish this year. We haven't the old fight," was the statement of Washington's assistant trainer.

"We expect a hard fight all the way," said Seagraves, the big guard.

Dobie will have the advantage over Bezdek's men in general experience and average weight, but comparing man to man in their respective positions, Oregon has the upper hand in everything except at end. There will be a change in this department, however, which will eliminate this weakness.

Where Oregon is outclassed in weight the difference is equalized by speed. This is particularly true of the backfield. Oregon's backfield will average about 156 to Washington's 185. Oregon depends entirely upon the speed of this backfield, and on dry fields is able to meet an opposing line with great force. Neither Miller nor Noble has ever shown the speed or agility which characterizes the work of Malarkey and Parsons.

Shiel will outweigh Bryant by 20 pounds; both are hard line smashers, but from the showing Shiel made against O. A. C. on the defense, especially in tackling, Bryant is the better.

Smith, at quarter, weighs 165, against "Anse" Cornell at 130. Owing to Cornell's game knee, Smith is able to do more running than the midget, and gives material aid to the backfield interference when carrying the ball, but for speed, generalship and all around knowledge of the position, Cornell leads. Smith is slower in calling signals, and falls way short of Oregon's midget when it comes to command. Washington's backfield was continually "beefing" at its quarter.

Oregon's line will weigh a little less than Washington's. Again the difference is made up in speed.

In reference to Oregon's line, Varnell said: "I haven't had the opportunity of watching Oregon's line work as much as I would like to. The little I saw of them in the Willamette game was good. They have good weight, but most of all speed. They should have no trouble with any team if they keep up and going."

Gellatley will oppose Risley, the former with an advantage of about 10 pounds. Gellatley is a Freshman, but shows a good knowledge of his position. Risley has had no trouble with any opponent so far, and no one is worrying about him now.

Snyder and Cook will have Seagraves and McPherson to take care of. Here Oregon has a slight advantage in weight. Cook and Seagraves are both playing their third year. Cook is the quicker of the two; both have played all-star style this year.

HAYWARD WILL PICK OREGON'S CROSS-COUNTRY TRIO SOON

Saturday's Three-Mile Run at Corvallis to See Oregon Represented by Three to Be Chosen From the Quartet of Payne, Bostwick, Huggins and Belding.

A. L. Bostwick, Chester Huggins and Don Belding were the first three runners to finish in the tryouts held yesterday afternoon to choose Oregon representatives for the inter-collegiate cross country run to be staged at Corvallis next Saturday.

Owing to a slight attack of tonsillitis, "Mose" Payne, the Athena jack rabbit, was unable to enter he tryouts. "Bill" says, however, that if Payne is in condition by Saturday he will be given a chance to try for a place on the team.

Track fans at O. A. C. and at Oregon will have an opportunity to see Hobgood, the Aggie star, and Payne, Oregon's "phenom," in competition.

Reports indicate that the first place will go to one of these men. It is not known whether each of the six colleges in the conference will send teams to Corvallis. This is the first year that a conference cross country has been scheduled, and it is intended to make the run an annual affair.

The first two and the last two laps of the race will be in the armory, thus giving the fans an opportunity to witness the start and the finish of the "three mile."

The men will be numbered in the order of their finishing, the team having the least number of points winning.

DR. MARCOTTE WANTS FEWER BUTTERFLIES

Baby Doll, or Bridge Playing Type of Woman Does Not Appeal to Vesper Speaker

A plea for men who will choose and choose wisely, for men who realize that the spirit is more important than things, was the keynote of the address by Doctor Marcotte, of Portland, at the Vesper service last Sunday, on "How Shall I Invest My Life?"

"The charge has been made," said Dr. Marcotte, "that we Americans are too much occupied with things to heed properly the higher call of the spirit. We need more men capable of bringing out, through the medium of friendship, loving out as it were, the latent possibilities of a youth or man. We need college professors who think of the green Freshman, not as a mere bundle of awkwardness, but as a man, and who are willing and able to bring out the man in him."

Speaking of the modern woman, he said: "We need fewer butterflies and more eagles; we need a race of women fitted physically to bear a race of giants, fitted intellectually to rear a race of poets; and fitted spiritually to rear a race of Children of God. We need less bridge and higher ideals; in a word, we need women that will leave the world better for their having been in it. Whether you shall be a bee, storing sweetness and building life, or a buzzard, haunting the earth's carrion—that depends on how you choose to invest your life."

TWO FORMER OREGON MEN ON WINGED "M" ELEVEN

Two former Oregon students, Bill Holden, ex-'16, and "Chuck" Taylor, '08, are on this year's football team of the Multnomah Club. The Winged "M," the official publication of the club, in a recent issue had the following to say about the duo:

"Among the well known athletes who have donned football togs, is "Chuck" Taylor, a star halfback for four years with the University of Oregon. He was rated one of the best halfbacks ever developed in the Northwest.

"Bill Holden, of last year's University of Oregon team, is holding down a guard position on this year's Multnomah eleven.

Everybody out for rooters practice Thursday, 4:00 P. M., Kincaid Field.

GREELEYS TO COMPETE FOR ELECTION RETURNS

Two Teams Are Selected for the Guard and Register; Speed Is the Watchword

The students in the Journalism Department have been divided into two teams, one each for the "Guard" and "Register," to assist in securing the election returns tonight. The work is to be a competitive contest, to see which team secures the returns first and most accurately.

Under the leadership of Merlin Batley and Margaret Stauffer, the following students will work on the "Guard": Frank Beach, Albert Bostwick, Harold Hamstreet, Cyrus Sweek, Don Belding, Bryant DeBar, Ira Bennett, Leigh Swinson, Wiley Knighton, Henry Sims, Walter Kennon, Fred Moley, Meader Fletcher, Charles Collier, Victory Phelps, Alice Hill, Flawnice Killingsworth, Helen Johns, Helen McCornack, Roberta Killam, Helen Downing, Madge Barry and Marjorie McGuire.

Milton Stoddard, Lois Ladd and Mary Baker are the captains of the "Register" team, and the following students will work with them: Martin Nelson, Carl Naylor, Floyd Westfield, Leo J. Furney, Re Kay, Harold Lockerbie, Alexander Bowen, Charles Dundore, Lee Hendricks, Gordon Clark, Edgar Garbade, John Gilbert, Walter Muirhead, Louise Allen, Juanita Wilkins, Mildred Gerig, Claire Raley, Edythe Rogers and Sarah Barker.

VERE WINDNAGLE TO RUN AGAINST HARVARD

Vere Windnagle, erstwhile Oregon speed "phenom," will make his debut Saturday under the colors of Cornell, against Harvard. The cross country race will cover a six-mile course at Ithica, New York. The New York Times, commenting on the Cornell team, says:

"Honmire has been leading the Cornell pack recently, but he has been closely followed by Potter and Windnagle. The last named is a newcomer to distance running at Ithica. He entered Cornell a year ago from a Western school. His work so far makes him look like one of the best distance runners in the University. He becomes eligible for the team for the first time this fall. Windnagle and Potter have been running neck and neck for second place in the trials held so far."

Rita Fraley has been chosen student manager for the Women's Glee Club.

Malarkey Is Out Of Football

"TICK" MALARKEY

"Tick" Malarkey, the fighting Irishman, who played a star game against the Gem Staters, is out of football for the rest of the season. At least the docor says so. Malarkey had his eye injured a week ago, and has been in the hospital until today.

A. C. SHELTON RETURNS

Collector for Museum Brings Specimens of Birds and Mammals from Roseburg.

A. C. Shelton, of the Zoology Department, has just returned from a ten day field trip in Douglas County, where he has been collecting birds, birds' eggs and mammals for the University of Oregon Museum. He made his headquarters at C. A. Brandt's fruit and vine ranch, five miles northwest of Roseburg. The material is sorted and labeled and is arranged for the benefit of all those who are interested in seeing it.

"I feel pleased with the results of this trip," said Mr. Shelton. "The trip itself was a direct result of the interest manifested in my exhibit at the Oregon State Fair. At least 15,000 people from all over the state saw this display, which consisted of 700 skins. One of the fair directors interested me in this part of the state and I took the trip.

"I used no special methods of collecting, but picked up whatever material I could find. The Roseburg district is fine for specimens, since not only Oregon birds abound there, but also many California types."

"This work was only started last February," continued Mr. Shelton. "Next year we are going to have a bigger and better collection."

Mr. Shelton is enthusiastic over his work and will make another trip some time in December, when he will spend two weeks in the Cascades, above McKenzie Bridge.

Mr. Shelton will leave for Portland on November 15, to install a new course in the grade schools there. This will consist of a study of the birds of Oregon, their appearance, nests, eggs, and haunts. Mr. Shelton is now preparing an extensive and detailed collection of birds, birds' nests, birds' eggs and small mammals to take with him.

DOBIE'S STAR PASSES ZENITH AS AGGIES MOUNT TO FAME

ONE TIME CERTAIN CHAMPIONS FIGHT TO AVERT CALAMITY. STANDING OF THREE CONFERENCE TEAMS REMAINS UNALTERED

ANTHROPOLOGIST TO SPEAK AT ASSEMBLY

Frederick Starr, of University of Chicago, to Present "The Mexico of Today"

Frederick Starr, Ph. D., Sc. D., and Professor of Anthropology at the University of Chicago, will be the speaker at tomorrow's assembly in Villard. His subject will be "The Mexico of Today."

Dr. Starr has made explorations into Mexico, Japan, the Congo Free State, Philippine Islands and Korea to study the ethnography of these countries. He was sent to Japan by the St. Louis Exposition to secure a group of Ainu, the aboriginal population of Japan. For this he was awarded a grand prize. He was also decorated by the King of Belgium for his work in the Congo Free State.

Dr. Starr is a lecturer of wide experience along anthropological research, and his various travels and experiences make him the more interesting. He is the author of many books and pamphlets.

The lecture tomorrow morning will be illustrated. Dr. Starr is on a leave of absence from the University of Chicago. He had intended going to Africa last fall, but the war prevented, and he is now making a trip through the Western states on his way to Mexico.

$150 WILLAMETTE GUARANTEE CAUSES DEFICIT FOR OREGON

While an overwhelming victory was scored against the Willamette team, the game, from a financial standpoint, was not so favorable. According to Graduate Manager Tiffany, the Student Body lost exactly $150.00, this amount being the guarantee to Harry L. Irvine, manager of the Methodist team. The local expenses of the game balanced with the gate receipts, which totaled $70.50.

"In the first few games of the season," Mr. Tiffany said, "we usually go a little behind, but the two coming big games ought to clear up all deficits. We expected to make more at Portland on the W. S. C. game, but the weather prevented a large crowd from attending."

R. W. RAYMOND SPEAKS ON MANUFACTURING TOPIC

R. W. Raymond, of Portland, President of the Oregon Manufacturers' Association, addressed the Industry and Commerce class Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, in Villard Hall, on "The Fundamentals of Manufacturing." He spoke of the things necessary to the success of the factories and manufacturing interests, and enumerated the different factors which must be considered, namely, the raw materials, the labor, the power to run the factories, the markets which must be available, and the working capital.

Hon. H. B. Miller, of Portland, will speak to the class next Thursday afternoon, November 5, at 2:00 o'clock.

A new school of education has been opened at the University of Pennsylvania. For the first time in its 150 years of existence, the medical school course will be open to women.

OREGON IS STRONG

Washington Does Not Show Wonderful Machine that Defeated Oregon Last Year by 3 Points

Pigskin dope fiends are struggling about in a matutinal nightmare. Dope this year is like the fourth dimension, there doesn't seem to be any. As a general rule, dopesters at the present time know nearly as much about the conference series as they did at the first of the season; surely, no more. Pre-season speculation had it "figgered out" that the championship scrap would be a triangular affair, with Washington, O. A. C. and Oregon at each of the angles, and the rest of the teams in the role as minor obstacles.

W. S. C. and Idaho play pretty heavy parts for minors, as the experience of the Aggies and the Varsity has attested.

Saturday's classic in scoreless football did not rearrange the dope an iota, but probably tangled matters a little more. Until Oregon meets Washington on November 14, all forecast is poetic license.

One thing, however, seems in the air: Dobie and the Washington hook have no life-lease on the Northwest Conference rag. Their traditional lease may die on the eve of its seventh term.

The championship is by no means a foregone conclusion. Saturday's fracas boosted O. A. C. stock higher than ever without minimizing the bullish tendency of the purple and gold. The fierceness of that struggle did not hide some weaknesses in both teams. Washington did not show the perfect football machine that defeated Oregon last season by a meagre three points. Neither was there the wonderful fight and endurance. After the first quarter the Washington eleven showed unmistakable signs of tiring. Their wonderful offense of the first quarter was gone, and their defense, although gritty, was not up to their usual standard. O. A. C. showed more fight and pep than ever. There is no doubt whatever that this is the heyday of football at Corvallis. The team is fast without being deficient in avoirdupois.

O. A. C. showed her best card when she shuffled Art Lutz into the deal. He has all-star stuff in him, is powerful, and has the defiance of a Krupp 16-inch. This luminary out-scintillated Miller in his battering ability. Possibly the greatest weakness in the O. A. C. eleven in the fact that there are eleven players instead of one team. They lack collective capacity, as was shown by the poor generalship in the Albany encounter. In the first quarter it was all Washington. O. A. C. would not have had a ghost of a show had not the unexpected happened, and what the unexpected was no one can say definitely. The fact was, Washington weakened and O. A. C. strengthened.

By Harry Kuck. Saturday's 0 to 0 battle was slow and disappointing, but showed up several points about both elevens. Neither team boasts of a field general like "Nance" Cornell. Either Washington or O. A. C. could have won that game by head work. In the last half Lutz was out-punting Miller from
