

AFTERMATH OF OREGON'S DEFEAT

Belding's time was 24:35. Howard 25:10, and Garbade 25:45. This time is better than had been made in training. All of the Oregon men finished strong. McKay, of Whitman, and Kadderly, of O. A. C., were exhausted and fainted after they crossed the tape.

Lee Reynolds, captain of the O. A. C. team, was the starter, and had complete charge of the race. The men were taken over the course in autos before the race. "A gold stop watch was given to the winner. The next five men were given medals.

"There were about 75 men in the armory," said Don Belding. "The admission was two bits. Outside and along the road there was a large crowd."

All girls interested in debating report to Mr. Prescott Wednesday, November 11, at 3:00 P. M. in Villard Hall.

favoritism is at work again. "Anyone who knows anything about football or conditions here would know better than to write such an article. We are all working together under circumstances which are not the most favorable, but there isn't a thought of any internal dissension," says the coach in discussing the affair.

The permanency of this line is dependent entirely on the rate of recovery of Cook and Beckett. The man who will hold down right end is not selected yet. The choice lies between Cornwall and Garrett.

A man upon whom a great deal of responsibility will be thrown in the Seattle battle is "Shy" Huntington, who is Bezdek's choice for quarter. Huntington is a Freshman and received his early football training in The Dalles. Although he lacks the experience and polished generalship of Cornell, his presence will add 35 pounds to the weight of the backfield and he is perhaps the surest tackler on the team.

The left halfback job is still open and it is hard to forecast which one of the trio will start the game. In all probability more than one of them will fill the position before the curtain falls.
