A SPLENDID RECORD

Two years out of college and at the head of the educational system of an empire. That is the record of Miss Fay Clark, '12. For Malheur County, of which Miss Clark is county superintendent of schools, is truly an empire in extent.

Four hundred and fifty miles by stage and wagon to visit four adjoining school districts. This is the trip which Miss Clark takes annually as part of her routine work of superintendence. Such a trip seems more possible when one recalls that the north line of Malheur County is about even with that of Lane County and that the great Eastern Oregon county extends south to the state line.

Forty pupils in one school and not one of them able to speak a word of English before coming to school. Such a school Miss Clark finds down on the Nevada border. There she visits a community of Spanish people, immigrants from the south slopes of the Pyrenees, herders of sheep in this land as yet unscarred by the steel of railroad tracks or of plowshares.

That a young girl should have become the first woman county school superintendent of the state legally to exercise the full powers of the office seems less remarkable when one knows Miss Clark. She was first in many things at college. She was a charter member of the Dramatic Club, and was leader of the first intercollegiate woman's debate team that ever represented the University of Oregon. An active member of the Eutaxian Society and of the Y. W. C. A., one of the organizers of the Lambda Rho, now Delta Gamma, an honor student, society editor of the Oregon Weekly, Miss Clark was as fully part of the social and educational life of the Student Body as if she had not been largely dependent upon her own resources for funds to carry her through her course.

Miss Clark is a living answer to the question: Does college training pay? Of course, college training does not explain all of her success. She had the right sort of foundation on which to build, the necessary determination and a right attitude toward her work. College training was the relatively minor, but quite necessary, ingredient which equipped her with the knowledge, the skill and the power to fill worthily each station in which she found herself in college and after college.

Not very attractive to a college girl, that backwood school building out on the Slow and Easy Railroad, in the forests of Southern Lane County. But Fay Clark did not seem to think it beneath her dignity to accept such a position, when congenial work did not offer. One year later, we see her teaching at Vale, the county seat of Malheur County, in Eastern Oregon, then comes a magnificent opportunity to take a position wherein her work will count largely in determining the educational future of the state. Once again, no hesitation, a quiet acceptance of responsibility, and what is far better, a quiet efficiency in the performance of duty which is reflecting credit upon the University in which she was trained.

Doubtless there are girls in the Department of Education of the University who may study with interest and profit, the story of Superintendent Clark, of Malheur.

W. C. Winslow, '06, of Salem, has become part owner of a large wheat ranch in Eastern Oregon.

Vere Windnagle, whose success as a distance runner at Cornell was noted in last week's alumni page, is to be one of the men to run under the auspices of the Multnomah Club, of Portland, in the races at the San Francisco exposition.

George Benschader, of Canby, who married Alice Stoddard, '11, last summer, had a narrow escape from death last week, when a telegraph pole to which he was strapped fell. When it began to fall he succeeded in loosening himself enough to avoid being mashed by the pole, but dislocated both knee caps and received some internal injuries.

Clip List for Reference When You Attend the Exposition This Year

Forty-one men and women graduates of the University of Oregon are at present in the state of California. Many of these alumni are among the most loyal to be found anywhere, and keep carefully in touch with campus affairs.

It is suggested that alumni who may be intending to go to the San Francisco or San Diego expositions, clip the list given below, in order that they may be able to find classmates who are residents of California. The list follows:

FOUR ALUMNI MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE

Leland L. Steiwer, '10, of Fossil, and wife, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Steiwer at Portland. Mrs. L. L. Steiwer was Miss Mabel Arm-priest, of Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edmonds, of The Dalles, visited the campus last week. Dr. John Straub, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, showed them about. Mrs. Edmonds is the daughter of Maud Atwater, a student at the University 33 years ago. Mr. Edmonds will soon open the First National Bank of Gardiner, at that place.

University alumni are not represented in as large numbers as usual in the legislature which convened at Salem yesterday.

Allen H. Eaton, '02, Walter B. Dillard, '00, A. A. Anderson, '06, and William I. Yawter, '86, are members of the lower house. Several other members have been students for greater or less periods of time.

Dudley Clark, '10, is reading clerk of the house of representatives.

SCULLEN RISES WITH RAPIDITY AT AMES

Herman A. Scullen, '10, is now assistant professor of geology at Iowa State College, at Ames. Mr. Scullen went to Ames as an instructor shortly after graduation from the University. He has recently been promoted to professorial rank and will be allowed a graduate student as assistant in the near future. Mr. Scullen is interesting himself in the organization of an honor society at Ames.

SEVERAL ALUMNI ARE ON FACULTY OF UNIVERSITY

Only two alumni of classes previous to 1900 are engaged as members of the faculty of the University of Oregon. Professor Edward H. McAlister, '90, of Mathematics and Astronomy, is one, and Professor Fredric Stanley Dunn, '92, of Latin, is the other.

Of classes since 1900, class 1912 boasts the largest number of teachers and assistants. Alberta Campbell is assistant in English, as is also Ida Viola Turney. Ruth M. Howell is assisting Professor Sweetser. Frieda Goldsmith helps Dr. Stuart in the Women's Gymnasium. Graham John Mitchell is instructor in the Department of Geology.

From class 1908 came Robert W. Prescott, assistant professor of Public Speaking, and Mozelle Hair, Secretary of the Correspondence Department. Last year's class left three assistant instructors, Hazel Rader in the Gymnasium; Leola Ewbanks in French and John Lawrence Whitman, assistant in Chemical Research.

Other alumni who are on the campus are Percy Paget Adams, '01, instructor in the School of Architecture; James H. Gilbert, '03, Ph. D., Columbia University, Professor of Economics; Charles Roy Reid, '06, instructor in Electrical Engineering; Mary Watson, '09, M. A., '11, instructor in English Literature; Hugh P. Currin, '12, electrician; Albert R. Tiffany, '08, Registrar, Pauline Potter, '13, Olga Olson, '12, and Mabel Eaton McClain, '05, assistants in the University Library; Susie Bannard, '01, stenographer in Extension Division; and Earl Kilpatrick, '09, instructor in Mathematics in the Extension Division.
