A HOPEFUL SIGN

When Mr. Harold Young, '14, goes to the University of New York as the first fellow from the University of Oregon School of Commerce, he will be taking advantage of an opportunity which will open perennially to the graduates of the University of Oregon.

Each year, a committee of the faculty of the University School of Commerce is to have the privilege of nominating a worthy graduate for entrance to the School of Commerce of the University of New York. This man will spend half his time at University work and the other half in some great corporation of New York City. He will be on the salary list of the corporation and the student roll of the University at the same time.

University of Oregon alumni have made an enviable record in the graduate schools of Eastern colleges. The president of one of the greatest of them said recently, in response to an inquiry from the Alumni Secretary: "I hope that your institution may send us other men as good as the ones you have sent in the past." Now comes the opportunity to measure up with other universities in a somewhat different field.

EARLY STUDENTS AND GRADUATES IN SALEM

Salem (Special to Alumni Section)—There are many members of the earlier classes of the University now residing in Salem, a number of whom hold positions of importance in the state and the community. Among those now residing in the city are:

John H. McNary, attorney at law; A. O. Condit, attorney at law; Lawrence T. Harris, justice of the Supreme Court; Jennie Beatie Harris; George G. Brown, clerk of the State Land Board; E. F. Carlton, Assistant State Superintendent of Public In-R. J. Hendricks, editor and manager of the Salem Statesman; Carey F. Martin, attorney at law; Charles V. Galloway, '99, Secretary of the State Tax Commission; Thomas Williams, head bookkeeper in the Ladd & Bush Bank; Merritt Davis, instructor in penmanship and bookkeeping in the Salem High School; Clifford Brown, hop and wool merchant and member of the City Council; Alice Bretherton Brown; W. Carlton Smith, M. D.; Lottie Johnston Smith; Walter C. Winslow, attorney at law.

SAM MAY IS TRAINING HIGH SCHOOL TRACK TEAM

Portland (Special to Alumni Section)—Sam May, who studied at Oregon until he entered Yale for the study of law, is coaching the athletic teams of Jefferson High School. His track team won a dual meet with Columbia last week.

May is delighted with the news that a full course in law has been established on the campus.

ROSE SEILER IS THE WIFE OF EDWARD COLTON MEEK

On April 18, Miss Rose Seiler was married to Edward Colton Meek. The wedding took place at the home of Henry Seiler, father of the bride, in Spokane. Both Mr. and Mrs. Meek are former students of the University of Oregon.

Visits Eastern Oregon Towns and Reports What He Finds Among the University Alumni

Heppner Junction, April 18. At Athena I found quite a number of old Oregon students. Homer Watts, a prominent attorney, and his wife, Marvel Watts, the mill man who has been very fortunate financially, B. B. Richards, City Recorder and commission merchant, Ralph McEwen and his wife (Miss Adele Goff), who are prosperous farmers, Delma Williamson and others, who were all glad to greet someone from Oregon. At Hilton I found Beatrice Littlefield, Chester Frazer, last year's Freshman, George Talbert, '09, Edith Still, who has charge of the library, and Miss Georgia Prather, who is teaching in the Freewater schools. Talbert is City Engineer.

Pendleton is a live town, not quite so lively as it is during the "Let 'er Buck" season, when Bert Jerard is on the job. Merle Chessman is doing his best to keep up the high standard of the East Oregonian. This paper and the Pendleton Tribune are and have been good friends of the University. Fred Steiwer is the efficient District Attorney. Lyman Rice is running his father's bank and also engaged in the "peach" business at Hood River between times. Met Glen Story here, who asked the writer to "take something," which was reluctantly refused. The "pep" found in the Tribune is due without doubt to Miss Edna Zimmerman's connection with the paper. Clarence Bishop, a former student, the largest manufacturer of Indian blankets in the United States, lives here and has always been a faithful friend of the University. Professors Hampton and Livermore are teaching in the Pendleton High School.

At Heppner we found C. E. Woodson, the attorney, and Ida Bell Roe, his wife, former teachers in the U. of O. Also Professor Hoffman, the able principal of the high school, Miss Josephine Cameron, a former Gamma Phi, who is preparing to be a lawyer, Harold Cohn and Art Crawford, who will enter U. of O. again next fall.

At The Dalles are many former Oregon students. Miss Alberta Campbell and Miss Banfield are both making good in the high school. Miss Maude Atwater Eddons is school clerk. Francis Galloway is a prominent attorney located here. Saw Nicksie, who was a member of the old Tawah Club some years ago. He expects to go east and study medicine at Johns Hopkins. The Dalles is a beautiful town and has many scenic opportunities.

Hood River was the last town visited, and it is necessary now to step carefully and to talk in a whisper, for not only is the town full of old Oregon students, but the University itself has quite a number of Hood River students and it is worth any man's life to deny that it is the prettiest town in Oregon. Here lives Lou Henderson, with his wife, Nell Caufield, Roy Kelly, the commission merchant, Roger Moe, Frances Nelson Maxwell, Frances Oberteuffer and scores of others.

TREW IS INVENTOR OF CARD SORTING MACHINE

Portland (Special to Alumni Section)—A. S. Trew, '09, has a remarkably good chance to become a millionaire. That is what the railroad accountants of the Pacific Slope are saying about him.

Trew is inventor of a card sorting machine which is replacing the earlier form much used in railroad offices. The machines now used are rented from the company which controls the patent. Some companies pay thousands of dollars yearly for the use of the few machines already in use.

The machines now in use sort, by means of holes in the cards. Trew's machine sorts at the rate of 20,000 per hour, and does not require any previous punching of the cards.

Trew spent all his available capital on the machine before he could enlist the interest of the railroads. Just when he had come to the end of his resources, a leading company saw the merit in the machine and backed him to the extent of about $50,000.

YOUNG BECOMES FELLOW

Graduate of 1914 Will Have First Opportunity to Make Good Under New Offer

Harold Young, graduated from the University last year, has been recommended as the first Oregon student to attend the University of New York under the fellowship recently granted to the University here, says the Eugene Register. Young is the son of Professor F. G. Young, head of the Department of Economics, and resides at 599 Ninth Avenue East.

Through the fellowship granted to the University of Oregon this year and which is expected to be made a permanent plan, the Department of Commerce recommends a senior or a recent graduate each year, to attend the University of New York. While there from two to four years he is to devote half of his time to college and half in the employment of one of a number of the largest corporations in the country with main offices in New York. He will receive between $65 and $70 a month while in college. At the end of his college course, if he makes good, he will be given a position with one of the corporations. Harold Young was graduated from the Department of Economics. While in college he was active in journalism and was chosen yell leader in his Senior year. He held the position of city editor of the Emerald during his Junior year.

Among the corporations which have made this offer and one of which Young will enter, are the First National Bank of New York, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the United States Steel Company and the Ingersoll Watch Company.

BATES WINS COVETED INTERNSHIP AT BELLEVUE

Editor of Alumni Page:—I have changed my address to 518 North Broadway, Baltimore, which will be my residence for the next two years.

It might interest you to know that Harold Bates, a former U. of O. man, now in his fourth year here, ranks as seventh highest man in his class. We consider it an honor to be ranked anywhere among the first thirty, which usually entitles one to an internship in the Johns Hopkins Hospital. Bates turned down his right to an internship here and took the competitive examination for interne at Bellvue Hospital, taking first place, much to our pleasure and admiration, for his service is generally considered to be the best in New York, and one for which the high men from all of the different Eastern medical schools try for.
